Jewish High Holy Days

Rabbi Michael Lerner & Marianne Williamson

Beyt Tikkun Synagogue at U.S.F. in San Francisco.

A traditional, innovative, welcoming, joyous, spiritually deep community welcoming to all.

This year, let's talk about real individual and social transformation (teshuvah and tikkun) and not let the observance of the Commemoration of 9/11 and the High Holy Days Services become occasions for Massive Denial and Hypocrisy by forgetting to acknowledge what our personal and global responsibilities are to helping Heal the World!

To build such a world, we need to get real about our individual and communal problems -the ways that we miss the mark and have become less than we could be (which is what we mean by "sins").

So this year, we will use 9/11 and Jewish High Holidays to do serious atonement.

FOR OUR SINS....

For our Sins as Americans...

- ...believing that security can be achieved through domination of others rather than through cooperation; enjoying the benefits of living in the richest country on earth while refusing to share what we have with the 2 billion people on this planet who live on less than $2 a day, many of whom will die from diseases directly related to malnutrition and poverty;
- ...allowing 9/11 to become a moment to undermine civil liberties and solidify American fears and American militarism, rather than a moment to develop a new global policy of generosity and caring that might provide far better security for the
- ...letting our government block and undermine international environmental agreements, rather than take the leadership in repairing the damage;

For Our Sins as Jews...

- ...not publicly criticizing Israel or the Jewish people when they are acting in opposition to the highest principles of the Jewish tradition, particularly its injunction to "love the Other, the stranger";
- ...blaming the entire Palestinian people for (inexcusable and murderous) acts of violence by a handful of terrorists-and then cutting off water, food, and access to hospitals, thereby supporting collective punishment for acts of a few;
- ...thinking our pain is more important than anyone else's pain;
- ...insisting that there is no "moral equivalence" between the deaths of innocent Israeli civilians and the deaths of innocent Palestinian civilians;
- ...not learning the depth and wisdom and meaning for our lives that can be found in Jewish spirituality, prayer, and in a Jewish path;

For Our Sins as Humans...

- ...looking at other people and at the physical world from the standpoint of "what we can get out of them" or "how they can be of use" rather than responding to them with awe and wonder at the miracle of their being;
- ...ignoring the oneness of all humanity, and instead thinking that our group, our tribe, our people, our country, our region, our corporation, our profession, our political party was so much better and so much more deserving than everyone else;
- ...not seeing the spark of divinity within each person—manifestations of God's loving energy on earth or within ourselves;
- ...not adequately rejoicing and celebrating the beauty and grandeur of the world around us;

Our Judaism is not primarily about sins--it's about gratitude, joyous celebration, and building a world of love, generosity and kindness. Join us! We can build a different kind of world--together.

HIGH HOLY DAYS: Rosh Hashanah; Friday night, Sept 26, Saturday and Sunday Sept. 27-28, Yom Kippur; Sunday night Oct. 5 & Monday Oct 6th

Led by Rabbi Michael Lerner. Plus guest teacher Marianne Williamson, on First Day of Rosh Hashanah, and Israeli Refuseniks Ron Gerlitz & Avner Efendowicz on Yom Kippur. Music by Achi Ben Shalom and the Tikkun band.

Rabbi Lerner conducts a service that is spiritually accessible and meaningful to everyone regardless of familiarity with Hebrew, yet includes the traditional prayers and music. It's a great place to meet people who share your values-welcoming to singles, families, GLBT's, and to non-Jews as well. Bring your family and your friends. And we have a children's religious school that teaches a non-chauvinist, spiritually alive and socially responsible Judaism-including a monthly social action day instead of normal classes (we call it Tikkun Olam day, and it's geared to the consciousness level of our young people).

Sliding Fee for High Holidays-if you register by September 19th. (add 20% to all ticket prices after that date):

Annual income: Under $40k/yr: all services:$100, per service: $45; $40k-$70k/yr: $175 (all) $80 (each service); Over $70 k: $250 all, $130 (each).children under 12 free (and childcare available, plus children's services, but you reserve their place by 9/19). Services free to members: membership cost: 1% of your annual income ( but not less than $200 for a single, $300 for a family) You can pay by credit card or check. ## in this issue

When A.C. Thompson came to me back in the fall of 2000 with the tale of two innocent men sentenced to life in prison for a crime they didn't commit, I could sense there was a great story here. The information A.C. uncovered in more than six months of investigation was stunning: John J. Tennison and Antoine Goff had been convicted of murder on the basis of the most flimsy evidence — and even worse, someone else had confessed to the crime. The evidence that Tennison's lawyers (including the indefatigable Jeff Adachi, who is now S.F.'s public defender) put together would later show that two San Francisco cops (Napoleon Hendrix and Earl Sanders, who by then was the assistant chief) had framed the defendants and that the prosecution had failed to give the defense key evidence that could have exonerated Tennison and Goff.

I think we both had the same thought: these kids got a really raw deal — and there's a good chance that nothing we can do will help them.

The truth is, a few high-profile stories to the contrary, most of the time, people who are wrongfully convicted and have no money for powerful lawyers and fancy investigations never get a second chance. Hurricane Carter had Bob Dylan (and at one point, about half of Hollywood). Geronimo Pratt had Stu Hanlon and the recognition that came from being a former Black Panther convicted in the days of J. Edgar Hoover and COINTELPRO. Tennison and Goff — two kids from Hunters Point who'd had their share of run-ins with the law — were facing pretty tough odds.

But A.C. did an amazing job on the story, producing "The Hardest Time" (published Jan. 17, 2001), one of the best investigative crime pieces we've ever run. Two lawyers from the high-powered firm of Kecker & Van Nest, Elliot Peters and Ethan Balogh, saw the story and agreed to take on the case pro bono (ultimately, their costs would be close to $800,000). And with Adachi's help, they did the almost unimaginable: they convinced a federal judge to vacate Tennison's conviction. Chances are good Goff will be exonerated soon.

Of course, the San Francisco Chronicle has since picked up the story, initially even giving us credit for breaking it (although Seth Rosenfeld's Aug. 27 front-pager ignored that fact). But A.C. Thompson first shone the light on this injustice — and against all odds, the innocent victims are going free.

Arrest 'em all

Just a thought: Is there any way that the people authorizing a program under which the city would grow medicinal marijuana could structure their plans so that if the feds move in they would have to arrest everyone? Think for a moment: If the entire city government were arrested, what would happen throughout the rest of the country? Such a move by the government would smell like fascism, and the rest of the country would come to your aid.

Missed metaphor

Re: Gabriel Roth's "Thanatophilia" (8/20/03).

Seybold's The Lovely Bones is about "letting go." Suzie's life-after-death experiences don't merely allow insight of a sort that more traditional forms of selective omniscience could not have encompassed, but they mirror the lives of the survivors as they deal (for better or for worse) with their loss and get on (for better or for worse) with their lives. I have no difficulty accepting that the murdered girl's ongoing awareness may be a metaphor that leaves Roth cold, but he seems to have completely missed the fact that it is a metaphor. Your loss (so to speak).

For readers who loved this book, Suzie's narration from beyond the grave is a devastatingly effective literary device; but it appears to me that you are saying that our reaction is simply the self-indulgent pleasure of immersing ourselves in a wish-fulfillment fantasy of the nonexistence of death.

Jeremy Cantor

The case for the condo-library

Re: "Let Them Eat Books" and the editorial "Reject the Condo Library" (8/20/03).

The article and editorial infer that the new library in the Glen Park Marketplace project (along with a family-owned grocery store and 15 apartments, two of them low-income) is a bad idea that results from back-room deals and that "traffic studies, environmental reviews, and the property appraisal were similarly skewed to favor the developer." And the subhead describes "pro-development forces" battling "community interests," with the editorial telling the board to start listening to the community.

In fact, the project was the subject of 30 community meetings and public hearings. The project team had booths at the Glen Park Festival for the past two years and hosted a storefront open house attended by neighbors with a range of opinions.

The Planning Commission, Board of Supervisors, and Board of Appeals endorsed the accuracy of the listed studies. The Sierra Club, Housing Action Coalition, Bicycle Coalition, SPUR, the Executive Committee of the Glen Park Association, and the past presidents of the Glen Park Merchants Association have supported the proposals. Scores of residents wrote letters and testified at hearing in support of the project.

The project was unanimously supported by the Planning Commission (including the supervisors' appointees) and the Board of Supervisors, as well as by the Library Commission, Budget Analyst, and the Board of Permit Appeals.

It's not because of "high-powered lobbying" that they support the Marketplace. They all agree that the development is a good idea for the city and for Glen Park.

I am confident that once the library, grocery store, and new neighbors replace the hole in the center of Glen Park, the project opponents cited in the article will come to agree.

David Prowler
San Francisco

Matthew Hirsch responds David Prowler, who lobbied for the Glen Park Marketplace, misrepresents the support for the project, which was predicated on his own assurance that environmental impact would be minimal. The Sierra Club (which Prowler identifies as a supporter) has called for a full environmental review before any construction begins, and now the Board of Supervisors is also reconsidering its decision to back the project.

Affordable housing in Glen Park

We don't understand your opposition to the Glen Park Branch Library, grocery, and condo project. As people who prefer an intimate city, with our everyday needs — such as groceries, libraries, parks, jobs, and child care — available within walking distance, our "community interests" are served by this project. In fact, the local neighborhood association, as well as the Housing Coalition, strongly supported this project at the Planning Commission months ago.

The biggest complaint of the opponents of this project was the lack of parking for the grocery store and library — even though there are three grocery stores with parking lots within a mile of the place! The extra space for parking would have increased traffic in an already congested area, and the cost of building that parking would have been paid through higher prices for groceries and less space for the library.

If this city is to remain affordable for immigrants and the working class, we must quit subsidizing parking and start building more housing close to transit. This project already reflects a decent compromise between the desire of a few neighbors for more parking and our request to replace the 15-car residential garage with three more housing units (thereby making the housing more affordable).

Neighborhood business is everybody's business!

On Aug. 27, the Bay Guardian will launch a new section devoted to neighborhood merchants, neighborhood services and neighborhood issues.

The weekly section will feature profiles, guides, business news, announcements, listings and reports on the political decisions that are changing our neighborhoods. The section will expand a core mission: to serve as the voice of the city's diverse and dynamic neighborhoods— from the point of view of an independent, locally owned and operated newspaper.

Fixing the Rent Board

Last month, the San Francisco Board of Supervisors rejected a proposal by tenants to create an elected Rent Board, as the cities of Santa Monica and Berkeley have done. The idea of electing the San Francisco Rent Board came out of a citywide tenants' convention last March. Several hundred tenants attended it and zeroed in on the landlord-controlled Rent Board as the number-one problem facing them today. Currently, the five board commissioners are all appointed by the mayor; tenants have just two seats, while landlords and property owners get the others.

It's little wonder that the Rent Board was identified as a problem. In theory, its job is to control rents and regulate landlords; instead, it rubber-stamps rent increases and takes a laissez-faire approach to landlord regulation. More than 80 percent of the cases that come before it are decided in favor of landlords. In 2001 the Rent Board heard and approved more than 4,900 landlord petitions for rent increases — yet in the same year it did not hold a single hearing on tenant petitions claiming illegal evictions.

That pattern has lasted for years. During the peak of the dot-com years, when evictions were quadrupling from year to year, the Rent Board consistently refused to hear or investigate wrongful-eviction claims by tenants. The board's record on regulating rent increases is equally bad. In one case, a landlord was awarded $5 million in capital improvement rent increases, even though he could not provide receipts documenting the cost of the work (and even though the law requires such receipts as a condition of approval).

More than 100 tenants attended the Board of Supervisors hearing on the proposal to elect the Rent Board, all of them telling similar stories of bias, abuse, and mistreatment.

Sadly, on a Board of Supervisors that rode into office with tenant votes, only Sups. Tom Ammiano, Chris Daly, and Matt Gonzalez supported the proposal to elect the Rent Board. Other supervisors expressed fear that electing the Rent Board would be "divisive" (as if landlords and tenants got along!).

Some said they feared that tenants would lose the elections, ignoring the unparalleled success tenants have had at the polls. Some feared that tenants would win the elections and make the Rent Board radically and dangerously pro-tenant.

A few people in the tenant community had similar reservations (although the proposal was backed by major tenant groups such as the Tenants Union, Tenderloin Housing Clinic, Housing Rights Committee, and St. Peter's Housing Committee). But in a nutshell, the politicians were scared of changing the status quo.

Tenants are underrepresented throughout the city on boards and commissions. Of the 11 supervisors who decided against giving tenants an elected Rent Board, all but Gonzalez are either homeowners or landlords (Jake McGoldrick rents his San Francisco flat but owns a place across the bay in Alameda).

The movement to reform the Rent Board won't go away, however. On Sept. 6, tenants will again come together for Tenant Convention II. The purpose of this second convention is to decide the next steps for Rent Board reform. Specifically, we'll be debating the pros and cons of electing the commissioners and a more moderate proposal of changing how the commissioners are appointed. Continuing the push for an elected board would mean collecting signatures to place the measure on the ballot. Reforming the appointment system, though, might be acceptable to the politicians and could be the most efficient way to go (especially when one thinks of the specter of anti-tenant/anti-rent control Gavin Newsom appointing the next Rent Board).

Whatever strategy is decided on, one thing is clear: tenants are fed up with a landlord-controlled Rent Board, and the supervisors may want to pay attention to that. ♦

Ted Gullicksen is a longtime tenant activist. Tenant Convention II is open to all tenants and will be held Fri/6, 11 a.m.—4 p.m., San Francisco Public Library, Main Branch, Koret Auditorium, 100 Larkin, S.F. (415) 282-6656.

The Tennison legacy

The day before the San Francisco Police Commission announced that acting chief Alex Fagan would be given the department's top job, a federal judge ordered the release of John J. Tennison, a San Francisco man who had been serving 25 years to life in state prison for a murder someone else confessed to. The timing was almost exquisite in its irony: Mayor Willie Brown and the Police Commission have demonstrated by appointing Fagan they aren't going to make any significant changes in a department that's been roiled by scandal — including the scandalous behavior by retiring chief Earl Sanders that helped put an innocent Tennison behind bars.

As A.C. Thompson reported when he broke this story in the Bay Guardian Jan. 17, 2001, Tennison and another man named Antoine Goff were charged with a 1989 murder, on the basis of inconsistent and unreliable statements two teenage girls gave to then-homicide inspectors Earl Sanders and Napoleon Hendrix. When the case went to trial, according to federal court records, Sanders and Hendrix, along with deputy district attorney George Butterworth, withheld from the defense key information that could have exonerated Tennison and Goff, including the fact that the eyewitnesses were coached — and that one was paid $2,500 from a secret SFPD slush fund. And the defense was never told another witness had come forward to exonerate the defendants (see "The Chief's Other Legal Problem," 3/5/03). In fact, another man had confessed to the crime — but Sanders, Hendrix, and Butterworth ignored that confession.

Tennison, who was 18, and Goff, 21, were convicted, and in 1990 began serving what would almost certainly be life sentences.

But public defender Jeff Adachi, who had represented Tennison as a young deputy, never gave up on the case. And after Thompson's story broke, demonstrating strongly that Tennison and Goff were innocent, a team of attorneys led by Elliot Peters and Ethan Balogh from the high-powered firm of Keker & Van Nest joined with Adachi and took up Tennison's case, donating roughly $800,000 worth of free legal work to freeing him.

And because of the publicity the case generated — and the tireless work of three heroic lawyers (along with Goff's pro bono counsel, Diana Samuelson) — U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilkens, in a 103-page decision, ruled that Tennison's conviction was tainted by shoddy evidence and ordered him released. Tennison walked out the doors of Mule Creek State Prison last week.

That's a remarkable victory, a huge cause for celebration. It's also a rare exception: In California, as in most of the United States, the legal system makes it almost impossible for people wrongfully convicted to get a fair shot at justice. Appeals of this sort are prohibitively expensive for most defendants, and the courts have consistently limited the ability of prisoners to challenge their convictions. And Gov. Gray Davis has set a de facto policy of never releasing convicted murderers on parole — making it even harder for most prisoners like Tennison and Goff to have any hope of living outside of razor-wire fences and concrete walls.

So the story of Tennison and Goff is and ought to be a powerful lesson for judges and lawmakers: Not every person found guilty by a jury actually committed the crime. And until the barriers to appeals are removed, hundreds of innocent people will suffer the unimaginable hell of a lifetime in confinement — for no valid reason.

But even this case, with its encouraging outcome, leaves some very serious problems in its wake. Among them:

- This isn't the only example of Sanders, Hendrix, and the District Attorney's Office allegedly framing an innocent person for a crime. In at least one other case, the California Supreme Court overturned the conviction of a man put in prison for murder by Hendrix and Sanders. The court found that Hendrix had presented "highly suspect" evidence against Luther Brock, who was freed after five years and now works for a nonprofit on the Peninsula. There may be many, many more cases like this — and District Attorney Terence Hallinan needs to immediately launch a full-scale investigation into whether the former police chief and his storied partner (who still works for the department) teamed up with local prosecutors to frame innocent people for serious crimes.

- Hallinan, who is running for reelection as a D.A. with "courage," has been largely missing in action on the Tennison-Goff case. Adachi has been asking him to reopen the case for six years, and Hallinan has done nothing. Instead, he allowed the state attorney general (who handles appellate-level cases for local D.A.s) to go into Wilken's court and repeatedly fight to keep Tennison locked up.

Now, to his credit, Hallinan says he asked the A.G. not to file new charges in the Tennison case and will work to ensure that Goff isn't stuck in prison, either. But Hallinan also needs to open a formal inquiry into the actions of Butterworth, who is still on his staff, to determine whether — as Wilkens strongly suggests in her ruling — the veteran prosecutor may have violated any policies, ethical codes, or laws in the Tennison case.

- The next mayor needs to recognize this case represents some serious, deep-rooted problems in the San Francisco Police Department. It's alarming that two homicide cops, Sanders and Hendrix, could twice be reprimanded by the courts for dubious, possibly illegal actions that put innocent people in prison — and the department did nothing. Sanders moved up through the ranks to become chief; Hendrix retired honorably and is now back, helping out on major cases. That's a representation of the systemic climate of corruption in the department — something that the appointment of Fagan will only perpetuate.

Although Sanders was formally, legally exonerated in the Fajitagate case, and charges against Fagan have been dropped, there's no question that both senior cops bear some responsibility for the attempted cover-up that happened (on their watch) after Fagan's son and two other cops allegedly beat up two San Francisco men and tried to steal their steak fajitas. Hallinan was too quick to let Sanders off the hook on that one, and there were problems with the way he handled the entire case. But at least he made an effort to hold some of the top cops accountable — something the mayor and the Police Commission have utterly failed to do.

Fagan is a part and product of the old-boy-network, code-of-silence climate at the Hall of Justice, and as long as he's in charge, the department will never regain the trust of the public. The next mayor needs a strong, independent chief — from the outside — to come in and clean up the mess (and voters need to pass the police-reform measure, Proposition H).

John J. Tennison is now a free man. But the stench of his wrongful conviction will hang around for much, much longer — until state and local officials start taking steps to make sure this kind of tragedy stops happening on a regular basis. ♦

The peakers are coming

Needed: a real public hearing, an open process, an EIR, and binding assurances for closure of the PG&E and Mirant plants

By Bruce B. Bruggmann

Philip De Andrade, the Paul Revere of Potrero Hill, flashed the SOS by e-mail from his Goat Hill Pizza restaurant on the top of the hill: The peakers are coming, the peakers are coming. And so, on the evening of Aug. 28, I hustled over to the Potrero Neighborhood House to attend one of the most annoying neighborhood meetings in my 38 years of covering local politics as editor of the Bay Guardian.

It was my first public meeting on Potrero Hill, where the Bay Guardian moved its offices last year, and I learned just how contemptuously city hall treats this neighborhood — and every person who lives and works with the toxic effects of the two dirty Mirant and Pacific Gas and Electric power plants.

The city eight months ago had secretly negotiated a deal to acquire four fossil-burning plants, then hired a former Calpine and PG&E engineer to develop them. The fix had been in for months to slam three and possibly four peakers into the Potrero waterfront, but only now was the San Francisco Public Utilities Commission coming to Potrero and letting the locals in on the big secret.

This is no way to do public business, by stifling the community and refusing to involve it early on in the decision-making process. The hearing was months late and scheduled at a bad time before the Labor Day weekend, with little advance public notice, little time to assess the SFPUC's data, ridiculous deadlines, a restricted public-comment format (one question permitted, two minutes per speaker, with many speakers getting cut off rudely in mid-sentence), and a dog and pony show by energy czar Ed Smeloff that only confirmed the main point: the peakers are being fast-tracked and rammed into your neighborhood, no alternatives, like it or lump it, you rubes.

Significantly, there were no elected officials at the meeting. The district supervisor Sophie Maxwell was conspicuously absent (her aide came, read a cop-out statement, and left early). No City Attorney Dennis Herrera (who lives in Dogpatch and negotiated the deal). No state senator John Burton (who lives on the hill and ought to be making the kind of calls he made to stop the Hastings Law School expansion). No supervisors, no mayor, no district attorney, no mayoral or district attorney candidates, and no elected or appointed officials yelling bloody murder or even uttering a critical peep before, during, or after. Why?

Smeloff shouldn't hold one more neighborhood meeting without — at minimum — having in hand a notice for a real full-scale public hearing before the Board of Supervisors, the SFPUC, or the Local Agency Formation Commission.

Meanwhile, neighborhood and public power activists must keep the pressure on: call on all elected officials, mayoral candidates, and SFPUC commissioners to halt this peaker steamroller and demand a real public hearing, an open and democratic process, a budget analyst's report, a complete and comprehensive environmental-impact report, and binding assurances that the PG&E and Mirant plants will be closed.

Sadly, this mess only demonstrates once again how wrong city hall has been all these years in allowing PG&E to monopolize city energy policy and keep it from building a real public power authority in accordance with the federal Raker Act. And so the peaker squad again raises the key questions: Why must the neighborhood and the people being poisoned exclusively bear the brunt of the city's enduring mistakes? Why doesn't city hall cop to these mistakes? Why won't city hall let the residents talk back properly and defend themselves? The answer, alas, is that PG&E and Mirant in effect still call the shots at city hall. ♦

On the bus

Transit riders urged not to pay increased fares and thereby force a showdown with city leaders

By Sharon Luk

As the San Francisco Municipal Railway fare hike that helped close the city's budget deficit went into effect Sept. 1, a coalition led by Transit Justice prepared to launch a fare strike to oppose what it characterizes as an attack on the city's poor and working class.

Saying the fare hike represents a regressive tax, Transit Justice members note that higher fares will hit hardest the working people and students who rely on public transit. Meanwhile, downtown corporate interests that generate profit from Muni services get by unscathed.

"Downtown businesses and corporations require Muni services to get workers and customers to their doors, and yet they don't contribute anything to making public transportation accessible," Transit Justice organizer Geri Almanza told the Bay Guardian. "The city needs to look to downtown to help support public transit, instead of putting the costs onto low-income people who are already struggling in a super-expensive city."

Ken Cleveland, director of government and public affairs for the Building Owners and Managers Association of San Francisco, doesn't think it's fair to ask businesses to close the shortfall. "Muni is a public service that everyone benefits from," he said. "We don't mind doing our part, but paying for Muni needs to be a shared burden."

In recent weeks community organizers have been leafleting at bus stops in busy transit areas such as the Outer Mission, Lower Haight, and Potrero Hill to prepare for a citywide fare strike beginning Sept. 2. Organizing large groups of people to board together for support, Transit Justice is urging people to refuse to pay either the whole fare or the extra quarter. The group is also encouraging cooperation between Muni patrons and Muni workers, who are also hit hard by the new budget. Strikes will be organized by area and bus line until Muni and the Board of Supervisors address community concerns with a public hearing.

According to the Municipal Transportation Agency (MTA), the seven-member board appointed by the mayor to oversee Muni and the Department of Parking and Traffic, these increases are in response to a budget crisis throughout the city and state. "The most important thing for us was to avoid service cuts, which we have," Muni public relations officer Maggie Lynch told us. "We did everything within the purview of what we could do [to avoid fare hikes]."

Cuts in revenue from the city's General Fund, as well as decreased funding from the state sales tax, have contributed to the emptying of Muni coffers. Transit Justice estimates that Muni fare increases are projected to plug a hole of about $15 million. Other new revenue sources include an extra $19 million from parking fees and $7 million in union givebacks.

Tom Wetzel, a member of the Transit Justice organizing committee, said several alternatives to fare hikes exist that could generate the needed revenue.

Resist: Flyers protesting fare hikes were posted near the Mariposa Muni yard.

"In the short run, there is a combination of options that, when taken together, could cover the relatively small amount of money [from fare hike revenue] that we're looking at," he said. "For example, in her 2000 Board of Supervisors campaign, candidate Denise D'Anne introduced a proposal to charge city managers and judges for parking. This proposal has been considered by the Green Party Transportation Working Group and Sup. Chris Daly, who estimates that it could raise between $1 million and $2 million. The Green Party has a number of its own proposals [in lieu of fare hikes] as well."

Long-term budget solutions endorsed by Transit Justice include the creation of a "transit assessment district" that would tax downtown property interests to cover gaps in Muni funding. The group also suggests doubling transit impact development fees (TIDFs), levied by the city on corporations in the greater downtown area in accordance with the amount of office space they own. Currently, TIDFs make up less than 9 percent of Muni's overall budget.

"Since Muni is a citywide service, a proposed transit assessment district should also apply citywide," Cleveland said of the proposals. "And TIDFs are pretty high already. In the interests of the long-term economic future of the city, we shouldn't stifle new development [with higher fees]."

Last March, the MTA voted 5-2 in favor of a fare hike. About 60 people from the public, primarily union workers opposed to the givebacks in the plan, attended the MTA board meeting to contest the proposed Muni budget.

Some describe the fare increase as a backdoor budget decision. "There was pretty low visibility about the proposed changes, in terms of public statements and press coverage," Wetzel said. "And that's augmented by the fact that Muni riders don't even get a vote."

Transit Justice hopes this will change with the strike. "We're asking for a public hearing to give the supervisors a better perspective about how [fare hikes] affect everyone in the city," Almanza said. "From there we demand that they pursue other funding options." ♦

Iraqi oil enters S.F. Bay

By George Schulz

Six months after it was an antiwar epicenter, the San Francisco Bay Area is developing a closer relationship with occupied Iraq, as Chevron-Texaco Corp. reportedly delivers shipments of Iraqi crude oil to its Richmond refinery.

Two postwar contracts were awarded to San Ramon-based ChevronTexaco in June and July. Company spokesperson Bonnie Chaikind told the Bay Guardian a contract for oil purchases would extend from August to the end of December. Beyond that, Chevron-Texaco is tight-lipped about details, like whether the oil would at any time enter the Bay Area or be refined at the Richmond plant.

"We tend not to go into specific details about things such as that," Chaikind said. "We don't discuss where our fleet is, and we view this solely as a security issue."

But activist groups including Direct Action to Stop the War say that at least one oil tanker has arrived in the Bay Area, and more shipments are scheduled. Reuters reported in July that ChevronTexaco is a big user of Iraqi oil for its West Coast refineries and that somewhere between two and four million barrels had been confirmed in purchases by the company. Citing oil industry publications and research, David Solnit of DASW said Iraqi oil is entering the bay on its way to Richmond, one of two West Coast ChevronTexaco refineries.

"The striking thing about the oil is the countries that supported the war are getting the bulk of it, namely the U.S. and Britain," Solnit said.

Quoting a DASW researcher, Solnit stated in an e-mail that Chevron had imported 2.1 million barrels of Iraqi oil to its Richmond refinery in February of this year and that "it's reasonable to expect that type of volume (up to a couple million barrels per month) to resume."

Chaikind refused to state how much the deals might be worth to ChevronTexaco, saying that such an answer would be "speculative" and could compromise the company's competitiveness. She did say that under the United Nations' Oil-for-Food program (dropped along with economic sanctions in May), Iraq provided for about 2 to 3 percent of the company's total crude trading.

Iraq's Ministry of Oil, overseen by U.S. administrators, is handling the sale of the oil, with revenues slated to enter a U.N.-created Development Fund for the beleaguered country. But Pratap Chatterjee of CorpWatch said the money will likely be sloshed around from one U.S. corporation to another. He believes money from the Development Fund will go toward reconstruction projects contracted by politically connected companies such as Halliburton.

"I don't think it's too much to call this a fancy money-laundering scheme," Gopal Dayaneni, a longtime anti-ChevronTexaco campaigner and organizer for the Design Action Collective, said.

International ANSWER's Bill Hackwell said the people of Iraq should determine the fate of the country's oil and postwar reconstruction efforts without the intrusion of authorities handpicked by the United States. Based on the development money's resemblance to a slush fund, Dayaneni questioned whether the Iraqi people would ever be able to democratically exercise control over their own resources.

"What's disturbing is that while this oil is owned by the Iraqi people and therefore sold in their interests, every step of the way the people making and moving the money are transnational corporations," Dayaneni said.

This isn't the only time the conflict has been profitable for Chevron-Texaco. Net income for the company in the first quarter of 2003 was $1.9 billion, up $1.2 billion from the same period the previous year, according to the company's most recent earnings report. The report partly attributes the higher earnings to "geopolitical uncertainty in Iraq and Venezuela."

Chaikind insisted ChevronTexaco "fully supports the goals of the United Nations to return oil revenue to the people of Iraq, and we consider that a part of rebuilding Iraq." In the meantime, she said, the company will continue to do business in the country as long as it makes economic sense.

Ensuring that business in Iraq "makes sense" seemed to be President

Blood for oil: Iraq's Ministry of Oil in Baghdad was spared by U.S. bombs and later guarded by U.S. troops, as everything around it was laid to waste.

George W. Bush's intention with May's Executive Order 13303, which states that "any attachment, judgment, decree, lien, execution, garnishment, or other judicial process is prohibited, and shall be deemed null and void with respect to the Development Fund for Iraq and all Iraqi petroleum and petroleum products, and interest therein."

Presumably that means oil producers are less likely to be punished for environmental accidents or human rights violations extending from the production and transport of the oil — at least as long as any sort of legal measures are "prohibited." The order could also potentially curb attempts to challenge U.S. control and distribution of the oil before an American or international court.

The order highlights Bush's eagerness to secure a safe environment in Iraq for foreign investors, and whether anyone will try to challenge the authority of the order in court has yet to be seen. Judicial pundit Andrew Napolitano told Fox News in August that the courts or Congress could be in a position to check the order's sweeping implications. ♦

Action alert Tell ChevronTexaco to take the oil elsewhere Tues/9, 5:30 p.m., Point Richmond, Cutting Blvd. and S. Garrard Blvd., Richmond. For more information go to Direct Action to Stop the War's Web site at www.actagainstwar.org.

Title tracking

New technology will help the library find its books, but privacy advocates fear devices that could 'identify any object anywhere, automatically'

By Matthew Hirsch

When city librarian Susan Hildreth wrote a widely published critique of the USA PATRIOT Act in May, titled "Big Brother Out of Our Libraries," in the San Francisco Chronicle, the San Francisco Public Library was in the midst of developing a plan to introduce radio frequency identification devices to help track its books and other materials.

If implemented, these devices would replace the bar codes on books with an embedded microchip that transmits information over radio signal to a central database via an RFID reader. The technology has been controversial in recent trial applications in the consumer market. Last month a consumer group launched a boycott against Gillette for tagging its razor blades in Wal-Mart stores, and state senator Debra Bowen opened public hearings Aug. 18 on the potential privacy invasions that come with RFID.

RFID has drawn a lot of attention for the truly fantastic notion that its tags may soon come embedded in everything from cars to candy bars. One well-known group working on RFID, the Auto-ID Center at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, actually publicizes its lofty goal to "identify any object anywhere, automatically" (see Techsploitation, 5/7/03). For now, the technology is still mostly confined to applications like FasTrak on the Bay Bridge and the Golden Gate Bridge, which allows commuters to automatically deduct highway toll fees from their credit cards. Some also use RFID to microchip their pets.

The San Francisco Public Library is interested in RFID because of its potential to speed up checkout and to virtually eliminate the risk of having materials lost or stolen. If properly tagged, each item could be identified remotely by an RFID reader within a limited range, allowing staff to find misplaced books.

But do the privacy concerns about using RFID in retail stores apply to the SFPL? Will the technology become more invasive as its capabilities improve and it becomes more widely adopted? Could it be used to identify people outside the library by the books they borrow?

Lee Tien of the Electronic Frontier Foundation told us the library model for RFID seems less of a concern than other consumer uses, but there should be a way for patrons to know they are not being tracked outside the library. "What makes the most sense is to temporarily disable the chip when the borrower borrows a book," Tien said, adding that the SFPL should also identify RFID tags on their materials so people know the one-eighth-inch device is there.

The biggest problem with the library using RFID, according to Tien, is that it builds a critical mass of the technology so that the public becomes more willing to accept the tracking device once more large corporations begin using it. It would be similar to how the public sector helped generate acceptance of video surveillance, which is now a widespread practice and largely unchallenged, he said. The SFPL may intend to address only its own needs, but its investment in RFID will stimulate more work on the technology and could accelerate its wider introduction to the consumer market.

Higher tech: The San Francisco Public Library plans to replace its bar code scanners with radio frequency identification devices that will allow materials to be located anywhere in the library.

Library Commission president Charles Higuera told the Bay Guardian RFID would be valuable for the SFPL, because it could save some of the $500,000 the library loses each year on materials that are checked out and never returned. Two years ago the SFPL proposed hiring a collection agency to solve that problem.

"I don't know that having a more sophisticated tracking system for collections materials is necessarily going to become a slippery slope toward erosion of privacy rights," Higuera told us in an interview last month.

For those concerns about the library's own intelligence gathering, Hildreth said the SFPL — which forgoes federal telecommunications funds for refusing to comply with the Children's Internet Protection Act (an invasive Ashcroft policy) — has no interest in spying on its patrons.

"We have decided that we want to go with this technology, [but] we would not implement this system to physically track materials individually, go out and get these materials from people's homes," she said.

And what about the Bush administration gaining easier access to library records to carry out the PATRIOT Act? Howard Besser, a professor of library and information sciences at UCLA, said it's all a matter of coding.

If the library codes its books using the International Standard Book Numbering system with no form of encryption, Besser said the Transportation Security Administration could set up readers at airports and know who's carrying subversive books onto airplanes, for example.

So long as the SFPL knows to use a unique, secretive code, however, Besser said safeguarding patron records would be relatively easy to do. "I am far more worried about RFID in the commercial sector than in the library," he said.

The SFPL's three-year strategic plan, with a recommendation to implement RFID and fund it in the 2004-05 budget, goes for Library Commission approval Sept. 4. The plan would have to pass the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, and then a library staff task force would convene to analyze RFID. ♦

Campaign Watch

Willie helps Kamala Deputy city attorney Kamala Harris's connection to Mayor Willie Brown isn't something she plays up in her campaign for district attorney. Ties to the famed politician — who has run the most corrupt administration in recent San Francisco history — have hurt many candidates seeking local elected office over the past few years.

When asked about her former romantic liaison with Brown, Harris doesn't deny it — but she's quick to say that hers will be an administration completely "independent" from the influence of Brown or that of any other major political player.

Maybe she meant he'd be making an "independent expenditure," instead of lending direct political support to her first political campaign. Because on Aug. 20 Brown sent out letters to folks who'd already contributed to the Kamala Harris for District Attorney Campaign blasting incumbent Terence Hallinan for "fail[ing] to protect the city of San Francisco" and informing recipients that even though they can only give a maximum of $500 to her main campaign, the law allows contributors to donate an additional $500 to a soft-money campaign on a candidate's behalf.

Brown then asked supporters to give to the group running a soft campaign on Harris's behalf, the California Voter Project. The project's political director is Philip Muller, a consultant who helped Brown become mayor in 1995. CVP's other pet candidate in San Francisco is mayoral candidate Sup. Gavin Newsom, according to its Web site. The CVP's purpose "is simple ... We help the candidates and measures we support win and those whom we oppose, lose."

So far, the Harris campaign has raised more than $140,000 — nearly as much dough as challengers Hallinan and Bill Fazio combined. So it's difficult to believe her election effort is really hurting for cash. But maybe more than $100K just isn't enough; a recorded call left on Harris supporters' answering machines "on behalf of Mayor Willie Brown and the California Voter Project" last week might offer a clue: "We've purchased and distributed media throughout San Francisco to increase Kamala Harris's name identification among voters" the message says. "If you make a contribution, you will help purchase additional media." Translation: "After spending more than $130,000, we don't think enough voters know who she is to guarantee a win."

Harris adviser Jim Rivaldo said the campaign was unpleasantly surprised to hear of the soft-money expenditure. "Willie Brown has endorsed Kamala, and we have no problem with that," Rivaldo said. "But it's not our intent to put Willie Brown front and center."

POA politics Don't look for the union representing the city's law enforcement officers to pick a horse anytime soon in the district attorney's race. An inside source tells us that voters have such a dim view of the Police Officers Association right now that no one actually wants the group's official stamp.

Even though Judge Kay Tsenin threw out conspiracy charges against the department's top brass — which at one time included former police chief Earl Sanders and Alex Fagan Sr. (who has just been named chief by Brown and the San Francisco Police Commission) — the impression is still out there that some sort of cover-up or something unseemly went on with the cops' handling of the Fajitagate mess.

The POA's longtime favorite has been Fazio, whom the association endorsed in 1995 and in 1999. But an inside source tells us the group would also have been pleased to support Harris — had she been willing to strongly oppose Proposition H, the police reform measure on the November ballot. Early in her campaign, Harris refused to take a stand on the measure, although she has since come out in favor of it. Prop. H is showing strong voter support in polls, but Rivaldo denies that influenced Harris's decision.

Two for Ammiano Sup. Tom Ammiano has picked up two noteworthy endorsements in the past week. First, Sup. Aaron Peskin, the North Beach leader known for his fierce intellect and scrappy ability to navigate through the complicated maze of city bureaucracy and cut a deal, gave Ammiano his official nod Aug. 27.

And so did actor George Takei, known for his ability to navigate the celestial seas as Lt. Hikaru Sulu — on the voyages of the USS Enterprise on Star Trek.

INNOCENT!

After 13 years in prison, John J. Tennison's life sentence is overturned. But will the people who framed him ever pay for it? By A.C. Thompson

I often think of something I heard John J. Tennison say on a scorching day in mid 2000. Sitting in a tiny room at Mule Creek State Prison, the following words spilled quietly from the solemn, dignified man:

"It just gets harder and harder every day."

At that point, Tennison had spent a decade caged for a murder he claimed he didn't commit.

Living in a six-by-eight-foot cell in a maximum security lockup, surrounded by a sea of lifers, Tennison kept his head down, trying to keep from being shanked or beaten or raped. During the day he worked an 18¢-an-hour job in the prison print shop. At night he called his mom and brother collect, or connected with the outside via FM radio.

Tennison had been banished from the free world for murdering 17-year-old Roderick "Cooley" Shannon in 1989.

Shannon lived in the Sunnydale housing projects in Visitation Valley. Tennison was from Hunter's Point. At the time a brutal tit-for-tat gang war was raging between black teens hailing from the two hoods. According to police, Tennison and accomplice Antoine Goff attacked Shannon and blasted him in the face with a shotgun in the parking lot of a grocery store. The cops figured it was revenge for a massacre carried out by Sunnydale thugs.

With the help of Tennison's then-lawyer, Jeff Adachi, and a private investigator, I revisited the crime — interviewing Tennison and Goff, studying the evidence, poring over the trial transcripts and myriad legal briefs, walking the crime scene, and tracking down witnesses to the slaying. After my journalistic probe, I felt fairly certain that a terrible injustice had been done, that Tennison and Goff had not killed Shannon, that police and prosecutors had engaged in dubious behavior — and that the real executioner was walking the streets (see "The Hardest Time," 1/17/01).

Still, I never really expected the two men to go free. The criminal justice system is stacked against convicts who assert their innocence. Amazingly, in most cases the defendant's "actual innocence" — to use a legal term — isn't even grounds for canceling a guilty verdict. Despite what you've seen on TV, an infinitesimally small number of cons ever have their sentences overturned. And in 2000 legal efforts to spring Tennison had basically shuddered to a standstill. Three state courts and one federal court had rejected his appeals. Goff's bid for freedom faced even more legal roadblocks.

Now, three years later, Tennison is free, adjusting to life on the other side of the wall, and it looks like Goff will be soon.

Tennison is a free man because early last week federal Judge Claudia Wilken issued a 103-page ruling voiding his conviction and ordering prison authorities to release him within 60 days. In her decision, Wilken noted that cops and prosecutors had buried a slew of pertinent clues, keeping key evidence — like the fact that a witness had cleared the defendants and blamed another man for the killing — from defense lawyers who represented Tennison and Goff at trial. Goff's sentence is likely to be reversed as well.

The judge's decision, I think, is spot on. Tennison and Goff should never have been jailed. The wafer-thin evidence arrayed against them was nothing more than the inconsistent, constantly morphing testimony of two young girls, Masina Fauolo and Pauline Maluina. Maluina has since recanted, saying homicide detectives and a prosecutor coached her to lie.

But Wilken's ruling is also terrifying. By my reading, it suggests what many of us close to the case have long suspected: that three high-profile San Francisco law enforcers — police inspector Napoleon Hendrix, Prentice Earl Sanders, who recently retired as police chief, and longtime assistant district attorney George Butterworth — deliberately framed two men.

These people worked hundreds of cases over the span of decades, and put hundreds of people in prison. Did they railroad anyone else?

Forty years ago the United States Supreme Court issued a landmark decision in a case called Brady v. Maryland. It involved a guy named John Brady, who got popped for shooting somebody during a robbery and was sentenced to death. But he didn't do it — another man pulled the trigger, a fact prosecutors concealed when Brady stood trial.

In the Brady decision, the supremes said, essentially, prosecutors and cops can't hide evidence that exonerates a defendant. Subsequent rulings have refined the concept and solidified Brady as a cornerstone of the American criminal justice system.

The Brady precedent lay at the heart of Tennison's habeas corpus appeal.

Judge Wilken, Adachi said, "identified five separate areas where both the police and prosecution failed to turn over evidence. It was new evidence, it was fresh in their minds at the time of John's trial, and they deliberately chose not to turn it over to the defense."

Adachi, now the city's top public defender, represented Tennison at trial as a young deputy in the Public Defender's Office and has crusaded for his release ever since. He views the ruling as an indictment of the San Francisco Police Department and District Attorney's Office. "The only case you can make is that this was an intentional suppression of evidence that led to the conviction of an innocent man," he said.

That buried evidence consists of:

- A memo authorizing the cops to draw $2,500 from a "Secret Witness Fund" to pay one of the witnesses who testified against Tennison and Goff. The police say they don't know what happened to the money. Giving cash to witnesses obviously raises doubts about their credibility and would've become a major legal issue at trial.

- A videotaped interview with a man named Luther Blue. On the tape, then-inspector Sanders lays out an alternative theory of the slaying and says a credible source placed Blue at the crime scene.

- Paperwork indicating the existence of a witness named Chante Smith. Smith told the cops Tennison and Goff weren't involved in the murder and fingered a man named Lovinsky Ricard as the assailant. She met with the police three times and gave them the names of seven people who could verify her story. The defense was never told anything about her.

- The fact that police ran a polygraph test on star witness Maluina. The results were inconsistent. Maluina told the polygrapher that she had lied about seeing the murder, and that she'd been pressured into lying by the other key witness, Fauolo. These damning statements were also hidden from the defense.

• Even after Tennison and Goff were found guilty, police and prosecutors continued to sit on evidence. In 1990, about two weeks after the trial concluded, Ricard was picked up on a minor drug beef. While in custody, he spontaneously told police he'd killed Shannon. It took six months for this bombshell to reach the defense lawyers, who by then were appealing the case with a motion for a new trial.

The prosecution and the police, Wilken asserted in her decision, "misled the court." Summing up, the judge wrote, "any one of the five" pieces of buried evidence "could have caused the result of Tennison's new trial motion and of his trial to have been different.... The Court's confidence in the outcome of this trial is undermined."

Most of the evidence at issue was piled loose 11 years after the trial by a team of lawyers led by Ethan Balogh and Elliot Peters, who took on Tennison's appeal pro bono in 2001. Looking at the overall arc of the case, "you've got to be really angry with the police and [assistant] district attorney," Peters told me. "They must've understood what they were doing. They had evidence that J.J. and Antoine weren't in-involved.... They shored up their chances of a conviction by concealing evidence."

Peters and company devoted thousands of hours to the case; had Tennison been paying, the appeal probably would've run him close to $800,000 in legal fees.

The attorneys hired a private detective to track down Maluina, who'd moved to San Diego. In what is probably the most damaging fact to emerge from the legal battle, Maluina gave a sworn statement saying her courtroom testimony was bunk — and that it had been coerced by the prosecution team.

"I told Inspector Hendrix and Mr. Butterworth that I had not witnessed the killing. I told them that Masina had asked me to lie, and that she had provided me with some information to give to the inspectors during interviews," Maluina said in her statement. Her testimony, she continued, "was a lie that I did not want to tell, but I felt pressured to do so by Masina, the police — especially Inspector Hendrix — and the prosecutor, Mr. Butterworth."

After reviewing Maluina's statement and all the facts, Wilken didn't touch on the issue of innocence. The judge simply said the actions of Sanders, Henderson, and Butterworth prevented Tennison from getting the equitable trial guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

However, one law enforcement official familiar with the case has a pretty strong opinion on the matter. "I've never seen a case like this," District Attorney Terence

Hallinan told me. "I don't just believe this was an improper conviction; I believe Tennison is an innocent man."

After interviewing two witnesses in the case and reading the judge's decision, Hallinan is instructing the state justice department (which handles criminal appeals) to free both men ASAP and is investigating Ricard, who is believed to be living in the Midwest.

I contacted Sanders, Hendrix, and Butterworth requesting comment for this story. Through a spokesperson, Butterworth declined to go on the record. I left messages for Sanders with his lawyer and called Hendrix at the Hall of Justice; neither got back to me.

However, when I interviewed Sanders in 2001, he claimed the police probe was conducted in good faith. "At no time in my career," Sanders said adamantly, "did I intentionally or unintentionally influence a witness."

I was with Dolly Tennison when she got the word via cell phone on the morning of Aug. 29. Her son, who entered prison at the age of 18 and is now 31, was about to stride through the gates of the penitentiary. Dolly was frantic, joyous, teary. She rushed to her car and hit the road for Lone, the isolated Central Valley town where the Mule Creek lockup is located. I doubt she drove the speed limit.

The night before, I talked to John Tennison's older brother, Bruce. His plans for the reunion were simple. "I want to sit down and have dinner with my brother ... and then I want to wake up and have breakfast with my brother," Bruce Tennison said. He spoke slowly, deliberately.

That is, until he started talking about the cops. "They knew they had the wrong man, and they went along with it anyway," he said. He pointed out that Sanders recently went to court to cleanse his record of any wrongdoing connected to the Fajitagate scandal. "The name Tennison has been tarnished for 13 years. My brother is labeled a murderer! I want my brother's name cleared!" Bruce shouted.

When I called Goff's cousin Jason Hopkins, he hadn't heard the news about Tennison — news that's likely to mean vindication for Goff as well. "Oooohh man! Damn! Ain't that a blessing. I'm trying not to cry right now," said Hopkins, who grew up with Goff and now runs Your Scents, an incense and African craft store in the Western Addition. "It's been 14 years."

Barry Melton represented Goff back in 1990. Melton, now the head public defender for Yolo County, was jazzed about the decision. "I have to believe a reversal in Tennison's case means a reversal in Goff's case," he told me. "It's wonderful news, not just for J.J. and Antoine but for their families as well — they've been going through this too."

Goff's mother, Francis Goff, was a little more cautious. She wanted to talk to her son's current lawyer, Diana Samuelson, before she got too excited. "It's been a nightmare," Francis Goff said softly. "They need to go after the officers who set this whole thing up." After a stint in the notorious Pelican Bay State Prison — a place known for its Aryan Brothers and unusually cruel solitary-confinement wing — Goff is currently doing his time in a massively overcrowded state lockup in Solano.

Legal experts will tell you most incidents where police and prosecutors fail to turn over evidence are accidental blunders — a misplaced file here, a mislabeled vial of blood there. Perhaps Sanders, Hendrix, and Butterworth simply bungled the Tennison-Goff case, inadvertently holding onto material they should've have given to the defense team.

That, however, seems doubtful.

There are simply too many pieces of evidence that obviously should've made it into the hands of the defense lawyers but didn't. Bear in mind: the rules about disclosing evidence aren't exactly quantum physics — they're simple, and they're known to every rookie cop and first-year law student. And these were not insignificant clues, either — we're talking about a witness who exonerated Tennison and Goff, and the confession of

Chronology of a frame-up

8/19/89 After a car chase, Roderick "Cooley" Shannon, 17, is beaten and shot to death in the parking lot of a grocery store located on the corner of Leland and Rutland Streets in Visitation Valley.

10/3/90 Antoine Goff and John J. Tennison stand trial in San Francisco Superior Court for the killing. Both claim innocence. The prosecution's case is built on the constantly mutating eyewitness testimony of two young girls, Masina Fauolo, 12, and Pauline Maluina, 14.

10/31/90 The jury convicts both men.

11/7/90 Lovinsky Ricard is picked up on a warrant unrelated to the shooting. Unprompted, he admits to slaying Shannon. Police release Ricard and sit on his confession for six months.

6/20/91 A judge sentences Goff to 27 years to life in state prison; Tennison gets 25 years to life. In the years that follow, deputy public defender Jeff Adachi, Diana Samuelson, and several other lawyers doggedly continue to fight on behalf of the two men.

7/2/92 Defense lawyers learn of Chante Smith. Smith witnessed the killing, fingered Ricard as the killer, and exonerated Tennison and Goff. She had told her story to police before trial, but notes from her interview were never disclosed to the defense.

8/18/93 Smith is given a polygraph test. Her statements about the killing are found to be truthful.

1/17/01 The Bay Guardian publishes "The Hardest Time," an exposé of the case strongly suggesting that Tennison and Goff are innocent. The story points out major inconsistencies in the statements of Fauolo and Maluina and numerous other flaws in the prosecution case. In the wake of the story, a team of lawyers at the San Francisco firm Kecker and Van Nest take up Tennison's appeals pro bono. Led by Elliot Peters and Ethan Balogh, the team pours thousands of hours into reinvestigating the case, files a mountain of briefs, and interviews Hendrix and Sanders under oath.

1/24/01 Patrick Barnett, a cousin of Shannon, tells the Bay Guardian he believes Tennison and Goff are innocent.

3/5/03 At the height of the Fajitagate circus, the Bay Guardian reports on new proof of police and prosecutorial misconduct unearthed by Balogh, Peters, and company. The San Francisco Chronicle follows two weeks later with front-page coverage of the fresh allegations.

6/25/03 An investigator for the Kecker team tracks down key witness Maluina, who recants her courtroom testimony and accuses the prosecution team of coaching her to lie. The story goes national. The Bay Guardian reveals that Luther Brock, whose murder conviction

Dolly Tennison

a man who claimed to be the killer. Add to that the allegation that Hendrix and Butterworth pressured Maluina to give bogus testimony and you have what looks to be a major-league frame-up.

Why? The court record indicates Sanders and Hendrix locked onto Tennison within days of the shooting. Both Tennison and Goff were regarded as somewhat rough characters who hung out with a crew of hard-ass young men at a time when the hollow clack-clack-clack of gunfire was a constant sound in the city's African American neighborhoods. Both were known to the police, and Tennison had been picked up a couple of times for selling weed.

Perhaps the cops thought they had the right guys and just didn't have enough evidence to convince a jury.

Even when the detectives unearthed credible evidence implicating another character, it seems they couldn't let go of their hunch about Tennison and Goff.

And what about Butterworth, the prosecutor? Well, the judge suggested he was a player in a team effort to win a conviction at any cost. She noted that when Butterworth put Maluina on the stand, he steered her away from the little matter of the secret polygraph test.

"Butterworth's questioning of Pauline reveals that he may have been aware of the polygraph examination and may have engaged in artful questioning to avoid the disclosure," Wilken wrote, before quoting a whole stream of courtroom dialogue.

Asked about Butterworth's role, Hallinan responded, "He didn't exercise the proper supervision over this investigation and prosecution." (Hallinan wasn't D.A. at the time of the trial.)

For the past 13 years John J. Tennison and Antoine Goff and have lived like ghosts, linked to the outside world only by letters, phone calls, and the occasional visit by family members. Those 13 years are gone. No judge's decision is ever going to return that stolen portion of their lives. All that's left now are the scars.

By contrast, the men responsible for this mess have yet to suffer any ill consequences. Today, Butterworth is still a senior deputy D.A. Hendrix is a respected cop. Sanders just retired on a full chief's pension of $188,718 a year. One last ugly question still hangs in the air:

Napoleon Hendrix and Earl Sanders put in more than 30 years at the Hall of Justice. George Butterworth has been there since 1976. The three men have handled hundreds of cases, many of them homicides.

What other convictions should we be looking at? ❖

Waiting for work: Business isn't exactly booming yet at Oakland's new Day Labor Center.

Labor dazed

Oakland cracks down on those who shun its new Day Labor Center, sparking bitter divisions over workers' rights. By Reet Rana Oakland's move to consolidate the city's day laborers in one location is proving problematic; both practically and politically. The city wants workers to go to its new Day Labor Center and is enforcing that desire with a $1,000 fine on employers who pick up laborers outside of the city-designated six-block hiring zone.

Carlos Mares is one of the many workers who choose not to abide by the city's ordinance, which was approved in 2001 but only enforced over the past few months. He says the Day Labor Center just doesn't have enough jobs for the hundreds of jornaleros, or day laborers, plying the streets of Fruitvale in the wee hours every morning. Furthermore, he and many other workers say the pickup zone is too small for everyone and the center is poorly located. Worst of all, it has little publicity, so few would-be employers know about it.

"The majority of workers think they are better off looking for work in the street than at the center," said Mares, speaking in Spanish. And he knows that in the United States, as far as public space goes, you're supposed to be allowed to stand anywhere.

The position taken by Mares and others has triggered protests and peppy squabbles with City Council president Ignacio De La Fuente, Latino community leaders, Fruitvale merchants, and dozens of local community groups, all pitted against Mares and other members of the community-based immigrant rights group Centro Legal de la Raza of Oakland.

Center of controversy

Three months ago, Oakland opened a new and improved Day Labor Center in a dark, 14,000-square-foot warehouse on the corner of San Leandro Avenue and High Street. Three barely visible hand-painted signs advertise what's inside. There is no functional plumbing; two portable toilets sit out front.

The hiring zone begins in front of the center and continues up the low-traffic, mostly industrial San Leandro Avenue to 34th Street. The only sign designating the pickup zone is a single 10-by-14-inch placard on a light post. The city also put up two small signs in the Walgreens and Goodwill parking lots, where day laborers commonly congregate, warning employers about the ordinance and the $1,000 fine, enforcement for which began when the new center opened.

Nearly 1,500 workers are registered at the center. But on any given day, only about a dozen are placed in long-term jobs with registered employers. On the street in front, getting work is a free-for-all. Whenever a truck rolls up, a dozen or more men rush toward it. Most are turned away and resume their wait, arms folded, wearing dejected, empty gazes.

Workers interviewed at the center by the Bay Guardian at two recent mornings confirmed Mares's assessment that there are not enough jobs coming through. Between 7 and 9 a.m. on both days, about 20 men got into trucks with the promise of work for the day: hauling, digging, painting, or one of dozens of other activities they could potentially be asked to do for $8 to $10 per hour.

When the Day Labor Center was created two years ago, it looked a lot like San Francisco's current Day Labor Center: a nondescript trailer located in an obscure corner of the city. In both cities, plans to build a center were driven at least in part by complaints from merchants and community associations about loitering day laborers.

De La Fuente proudly admits that he, like many of the workers, came to the United States illegally. For several years he was a day laborer himself. That's why, combined with his years of work with community and labor organizations, he thinks he has exceptional insight into the workers' plight. But as a city councilor, and a potential candidate to succeed Mayor Jerry Brown, De La Fuente told the Bay Guardian, "my job is to balance all the needs."

Dueling protests

"I have full support of the City Council," De La Fuente said. After working on the issue for seven years, he is adamant about his day labor plan and says he will never change the ordinance.

But for nearly two years Mares and his group at Centro tried to meet with De La Fuente to share their concerns about the ordinance. They also wanted to discuss the Day Labor Center and reported cases of police harassment, like pushing, aggressive orders to disperse, jaywalking tickets, and arrests.

Ever since De La Fuente told cops to enforce the ordinance, Mares said, the regular flow of employers at the Walgreens parking lot on Foothill Boulevard and Fruitvale Avenue has vanished. For a while work became so scarce that he was sleeping on the streets and couldn't send money back home to Mexico. His situation was typical of the testimonies delivered at the July meeting with Centro that De La Fuente was reportedly supposed to attend but didn't.

De La Fuente told us he didn't go to the meeting with Centro because the group pasted flyers all over Fruitvale saying it was going to have a big protest and invited every progressive organization in the Bay Area to confront De La Fuente because he won't listen to the workers. He said he just can't get anything done in such a confrontational protest atmosphere.

"They're just shouting matches," he said. "It was going to be like what they did in San Francisco" — a reference to the charged City Hall protests led by San Francisco's Centro Legal (a separate organization) against Mayor Willie Brown in December 2001, in the wake of San Francisco's battle for the Day Labor Center contract there.

Yet De La Fuente led his own raucous protest against Centro on July 26, a week after he shunned their meeting. On the steps of Centro's office, he gathered a crowd of seniors, merchants, Latino community leaders, and lots of angry local residents urging Centro to "stop dividing the community."

Workers divided

De La Fuente accused Centro's executive director, Patricia Loya, of deceiving workers for her own political advantage and said Centro has tried to turn people against Volunteers of America, which runs the center.

"We know that we need to improve, but I can tell you that Centro Legal has done more damage than any other Hispanic organization in the community," he told the crowd. "If you're going to use these tactics, you better leave town because we're not going to work with you."

Loya told the Bay Guardian, "We don't want to control the Day Labor Center, but we are supporting these workers, informing them of their rights and civil liberties, and supporting them to organize."

Loya says she has documented evidence of the police abuses against workers. An Oakland Police Department spokesperson did not respond to these allegations before press time, but De La Fuente insists the accusations are "blatant lies." He gave special instructions to the police in Fruitvale not to bother workers, only employers, and to tell employers to go to the Day Labor Center. He says that only four citations have been issued and that cops mostly give out warnings.

Loya and De La Fuente agree that a big reason contractors are not coming by as much is the slow economy. But Loya says the ordinance seems to be totally drying up the supply of employers.

Emilia Otero, program director for Volunteers of America, challenges Loya to make a real difference in the workers' lives. "Loya doesn't find them work or give them food, training, or language skills," she said, referring to all of the services available at the center.

Employers from the Day labor Center are asked to drop off workers at the center at day's end, in a safe environment where they can congregare and leave in groups, with watchful eyes nearby. Things like that make a difference to people walking home with cash in pocket from the day's work — many of them have been mugged in the past.

Publicizing the center and attracting more work is one of Otero's goals, she told us. But she concedes that plenty of workers stand around looking for work just four or five blocks down the road, and they still ask, "Where is the Day Labor Center?"

Loya supports the idea of the center, which she said could be even more effective if the city would stop shutting out her group. But there's another issue involved. "Even if they could attract more jobs to their center," she said, "there is still going to be need for a man to say he's going to elect to find work in ways that he deems effective. So long as he's not breaking laws, and not disturbing people, he wants the right to do that." ♦

Saving the shacks

S.F. residents try to rescue 1906 quake-era structures from the wrecking ball. By Kerry Rodgers

Back in 1906, San Francisco knew a few things about housing the homeless in a hurry. The city had been ravaged by earthquake and fire, and more than a quarter of a million people were left without shelter. As part of a massive effort to provide relief, the city and the army constructed some 5,600 wooden shacks (14 by 18 feet on average) and lined them up in rows on public land for refugees to live in at a cost of $2 a month. In 2003 only 19 of these relics remain standing in San Francisco. Four of them are now looking for a home of their own.

By 1907 more than 15,000 tenants had been given the option to purchase their shacks from the city for $100 (minus accrued rent) and move them to private vacant lots; over time many of them were cobbled together to form slightly larger homes. The four shacks in question were moved to the Outer Sunset in 1908 and transformed into two cottages, which now share a lot at 4329-31 Kirkham St., near 47th Avenue. They're not pretty. Two blocks from Ocean Beach, on a street lined with cute houses and cozy apartments, the weed-infested, trash-littered, boarded-up property is a downright eyesore. But now their future is in jeopardy, and some San Francisco residents are wondering, don't these historic structures deserve to be preserved?

When brothers Jeff and Ron Reich inherited the Kirkham Street real estate from their mother in 2002, it was a ramshackle rental property. They planned to sell it to help fund their retirement, and it wasn't until a deal was in escrow that they discovered they couldn't transfer the title. It turned out that 30 years ago the buildings had been condemned; in order for the property to change hands, they needed to be brought up to code or torn down.

The Reichs chose the latter option and hired general contractor Ridge Greene of RGM and Associates to manage the demolition. (A 25-person construction management company out of Concord, RGM has been involved in a number of historical restoration projects.) Once the demolition papers were filed, however, RGM was notified by the San Francisco Planning Department that these little structures were historic.

Enter Woody LaBounty, director of the Western Neighborhoods Project. Raised in the Richmond District, LaBounty is a history buff who, after noticing a lack of archived information about his childhood neighborhood, launched the nonprofit project to collect and preserve living memories and documents regarding the past of the "outsidelands." When LaBounty got word of the now-identified earthquake shacks' scheduled demolition, saving them from the wrecking ball became his personal mission. "The shacks are physical evidence of one of the greatest humanitarian efforts ever," he says. With the centennial of the disaster nearing, he hopes these four can serve as part of an educational monument.

LaBounty mobilized. The first step was securing the goodwill of the owners, who agreed to put off the demolition process for a year — and generously offered to donate their demo budget (between $7,500 and $8,500) to help relocate the buildings. Then, fortuitously, he was contacted by Reed Walker, a project manager for the 100-employee construction firm Mayta and Jensen, which has specialized in custom residential renovations in San Francisco since 1942. Walker volunteered to organize a rather extensive renovation effort and prevailed on friends at other companies to pitch in. "I like to salvage old buildings," says Walker, who usually works on high-end remodels of old homes. "It would be a fun community thing to do." He adds that the shacks' rundown condition is "no big deal. It would be easy to do."

Now all they needed was a place to go.

The most obvious option was the spacious Presidio, which already houses two restored earthquake shacks on Mesa Street, moved there by the army in 1985. Last December hopeful conversations began with the Presidio Trust (the management organization for the Presidio since 1996), but in early August the trust, citing historical accuracy, officially declined the additional shacks.

"The historians have told us that the Former homes, homeless: Four historic earthquake shacks on Kirkham Street may be demolished if a new site is not found for them.

shacks were not part of the Presidio history," says Ron Sonenshine, spokesperson for the trust. The Presidio land was host to refugee tents, not shacks, he explains. The shacks there were relocated when the National Park Service managed the Presidio. "To be historically correct," Sonenshine asserts, "they do not belong here."

"That's a stupid and narrow reason for not taking those shacks," asserts Jane Cryan, founder of the now defunct Society for the Preservation and Appreciation of San Francisco 1906 Earthquake Refugee Shacks. In the early 1980s, Cryan fought a long (and ultimately successful) battle to secure landmark status for a cluster of shacks on 24th Street, and she also helped champion the restoration of the earthquake shacks in the Presidio. Recruited back into action by LaBounty, she says that "the Kirkham shacks belong with the shacks at the Presidio. The army and the relief corporation built those shacks."

In the meantime, the Reichs have run into other troubles with the Kirkham shacks. In July angry squatters being escorted off the property threatened to return and burn the place down.

"Once that happened the owners started losing patience; they don't want a liability problem on their shoulders," says

Greene, who, at the owners' request, is now moving forward with the demolition permit. He notes that the city seems to be stonewalling, refusing to renew the condemnation that would allow demolition. "We're hoping they don't get torn down, but if no one will take them, it's not fair for the owners to have to store them for free."

The next step for LaBounty is formulating Plan B. People with private land in Modoc, Shasta, and Sonoma Counties have offered to take the shacks. So have the Museum of the City of San Francisco, which, unfortunately, doesn't currently have space for them, and the Oakland Museum of California, which can only house one. Most recently, LaBounty has begun conversations with Treasure Island's Development Authority regarding a temporary site there.

"Ultimately it would be nice to have them all together in the city where the public can come across them," he says. "Especially in a park atmosphere, as they were originally built." ❖

For a complete list of remaining S.F. earthquake shacks or to report an additional undocumented shack, go to the Western Neighborhoods Project Web site at www.outsidelands.org.

Traffic circles visit the Haight

The Haight has a proud heritage of social experimentation and questioning the status quo. Now the neighborhood sits on the front lines of a new revolution: in traffic management. The transportation merry-go-round known as the roundabout or traffic circle — a common sight in towns and cities throughout the U.K. as well U.S. cities like Portland, Ore., and Seattle — has hit San Francisco.

Five temporary traffic circles were installed along Page Street (at Clayton, Ashbury, Lyon, and Scott) and Waller Street (at Steiner) in August for a month-long trial. Proponents of the project, including the San Francisco Bicycle Coalition, say their aims are a reduction in speeding, decreased vehicle emissions, and — a longer-term goal of the SFBC's — the transformation of Page Street into a city bicyclist's dream: a bike boulevard, where substantial automotive traffic is diverted to other nearby thoroughfares. Neighborhood residents will vote in early September on making the five traffic circles permanent fixtures — as well as installing six others. (All households within one block of each circle will vote on that circle via a mail-in ballot sent by the Department of Parking and Traffic.)

Implemented by the DPT, the circles are intended to calm traffic, making the street safer for pedestrians and bicyclists. As SFBC program director Josh Hart points out, a long, straight thoroughfare like Page Street can look like a freeway to some drivers. The traffic circles "interrupt the visual field" enough to dispel that notion. And drivers are considered more likely to maintain slower speeds if they have to navigate around the circle rather than halting abruptly at a four-way stop.

Hart cites studies conducted in Seattle that report traffic circles have reduced "the number of motor vehicle crashes up to 90 percent." "It's great for pedestrians," he adds, "because drivers will no longer be slamming on the breaks and then speeding up. And it's great for bicyclists because they won't lose the momentum that's so essential to bicycling."

The goal of decreasing vehicle emissions secured the project a grant from the Bay Area Air Quality Management District — emissions are higher when drivers repeatedly halt and then accelerate. Another

Openings, closings, and other life changes on the small-business scene

Like the hydra of Greek legend, another Starbucks rears its logo'd head, this time in the Bay Guardian's very own hood. A sign announcing the coffee chain's imminent arrival has appeared in the window of a building at 16th Street and Kansas, which should give nearby locally owned businesses such as Sally's and Cafe Rustico, at De Haro and 16th Street, something (unpleasant) to think about. "I heard about it," Rustico owner Henry Dreng says. "That's bad. They're taking over the whole Bay Area. It seems like they're on every corner, and now they might ruin other coffee shops in this area. Small businesses don't have the same opportunities to advertise."

Are others in the neighborhood concerned? "What's Starbucks?" coyly wonders Goat Hill Pizza co-owner Philip De Andrade, who presides over the Potrero Hill Association of Merchants and Businesses (www.potrerohill.biz). "Chats, Sinkers, Sally's, and Farley's — those are my coffee shops." (And really, if everyone in San Francisco decided to just ignore the existence of Starbucks, perhaps it would have the happy effect of making the chain magically disappear.) "The neighbors are talking about starting a petition," De Andrade says on a more serious note. "But officially, the merchants haven't taken a position or talked about it yet. We're always a little late. We wait until the approvals are in." However, he adds, "we're composed of small businesses who are trying to make a living ourselves. It's hard enough without these big boxes, like Starbucks, coming in. Then again, there are jobs for people in the big boxes, so it's tough to decipher. Where do you draw the line?"

For answers, De Andrade and other interested parties may want to pick the brains of Sunset Neighbors for Action (415-731-1434; ask for Tess Manalo-Ventresca) and the Hayes Valley Neighborhood Association (www.hayesvalleysf.org), who, as we reported last week in Neighborhood Business, know a little something about tangling with the coffee giant.

In other news, it's time to clear some space on your bookshelves. The mother of all used-book sales hits Fort Mason Center's Festival Pavilion this week. Thirty-nine years strong, the Friends of the San Francisco Public Library (www.friendsandfoundation.org) annual 'Big Book Sale' takes place Sept. 4 through 7, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. (Sept. 4, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., members-only preview sale), offers some 100,000 titles donated by people and businesses throughout the Bay Area, and benefits the 27-branch San Francisco Public Library as well as literary programs in San Francisco.

Postmortem: The Presidio, one of the last single-screen movie theaters in San Francisco, has shut its doors after 20 years. ❖

Traffic circles

environmental plus, Hart points out, is that the traffic circles reclaim asphalt areas for plants and flowers, exchanging hardscape for landscape.

While the circles might be expected to affect traffic flow on neighboring Haight Street, Stephen LaPorta, who manages Haight Ashbury Music, and Kim Pringle, owner of Behind the Post Office, say they haven't noticed much change. "I personally think it's a good idea in theory, as long as drivers know to look in all four directions," LaPorta says. "I've almost gotten plowed into three or four times.... Then again, there are people who don't stop at Stop signs." Pringle, on the other hand, says she's "stumped" by the project. "I don't see the purpose, because people don't really drive that much on Page." And, she adds, "you can still see the faint Stop signs that were painted in the road, so people driving by the circles for the first time get confused."

Haight Ashbury Merchant's Association president K.C. Evans, who runs Coffee, Tea and Spice in the Upper Haight, says the organization "is taking no formal stance on the traffic circles. We're leaving it up to the neighbors to decide.... There's a lot of controversy over this one. You'll definitely be hearing a lot more about it."

The SFBC can attest to that, having gotten quite a bit of feedback over the past few weeks. Some residents in the neighborhood aren't so sure the circles are an improvement, let alone safe: Ted Loenberg calls the circles an accident waiting to happen. "Pedestrians are rendered from sacrosanct under California law to the lowest priority," he says. "Drivers think, 'No Stop sign? Then I get to go.'" And indeed, Hart says, community input suggests some drivers are taking advantage of the lack of stop signs.

Acknowledging that this transitional phase calls for more education, the SFBC plans, for starters, to install pop-up Stop for Pedestrian signs to remind motorists that peds still have the right of way. In general, Hart says, "our position right now is, let's take a cautious approach to the circles. At this point they probably need the Stop signs still, until we can install additional traffic-calming measures" such as corner "bulb-outs," sidewalk extensions that would reduce pedestrian crossing time. Unfortunately, according to Hart, the DPT says the BAAQMD grant makes reinstating the Stop signs problematic, since the idea was to cut down on emissions by cutting them out of the picture.

Fiscal and safety issues aside, proponents also face a third hurdle: aesthetics. Page Street resident Ed Korthof, a newly sworn fan of the circles, says he likes "that they replace Stop signs." Other residents, though, proud of their neighborhood's visual charms, are turned off by the current traffic circles' appearance. However, Hart says the community need not fear. Should the neighborhood vote in favor, permanent ones will be landscaped. In Seattle, communities have even competed over who has the prettiest circle. Will a similar competitive streak turn Page Street into a gorgeous exemplar of landscaping chic? Neighborhood residents will soon decide. For updates check the SFBC Web site at www.sf-bike.org or the DPT site at www.ci.sf.ca.us/dpt.

Power down

Dear Readers:

Why is it that any mention of S-M nets more picky, niggling "corrections" than any other topic? I needn't go into any great detail here — suffice it to say I wasn't always a married lady sitting home watching TiVo. So it's not owing to my somehow lacking sufficient familiarity with the material. Rather, it's the nature of the S-M community, which tends, as a group, to think too much and talk too much and write self-important e-mails when it could be playing. This could have something to do with it being full of the sort of people drawn to activities that, while they appear edgy and daring, are in fact safer than golf, which at least carries a risk of being struck by lightning. S-M lends itself to overplanning, overequipping, and an obsession with detail. In other words, it's for nerds. I say this with all due respect and (as a risk-averse, nerdish person) self-recognition, but I say it anyway: S-M isn't exactly running the bulls at Pamplona; S-M is a petting zoo. Get over your bad selves.

None of this explains why it's always the scenesters insisting that any passing mention of perviness must include their own personal perversion. If I write about bondage, say, I'll get "Of course, it's originally an Apache initiation ritual, but you should never hang someone from their eyeballs without gloves. Also, I think you were remiss in failing to mention cortical saline inflation ..." Sigh. I didn't mention Apache cortical-inflation eyeball hanging because I was trying to make sure everybody understands what I mean by "top" and "bottom" first, and I only have this one little column to do it in, you self-inflated sixth-grade suck-up. Sit down. And don't write me letters.

The following letter (and prime example) is actually from Sex News Daily, a fun e-newsletter you should all check out anyway.

Love,
Andrea

"Andrea's answer was incomplete. 'Spanking' is a huge niche, totally separate from SM. My girlfriend (we met through spanking.com) likes having to face real consequences for her actions. For instance, for the last 6 months, she has been losing on average 8lbs/month."

Dear Guy Who Wrote to SND Instead of to Me:

OK, that's not only beside any point I may have been making, it's also kind of creepy. And spanking is too S-M. S-M is an umbrella term. You are a spoke.

Love,
Andrea

Dear Andrea:

You were missing something in the letter about Secretary. She's talking about media recognition. Do you know how much I'd like to see a female/masochist S-M version of The Incredible True Adventure of Two Girls in Love or anything reflecting the reality of my experience in the gay-lesbian film festival? We're not there as the Cleavers or as revolutionaries, we don't have love stories or tragedies, we're just invisible. I want my life to exist as a cultural experience, and I think that's what your writer was saying. And when she fears that goths, punks, and rednecks are her only options, I understand. We should be seeing our own worlds there the same as we do at Pride or in the personals. But something is preventing the majority from being associated with the "S-M community." There's something wrong here.

Some of my own alienation from the scene is gender specific, but I want to suggest that there's an issue with the S-M community that is limiting our liberation as a people. There's an emphasis on exclusivity and hipness rather than the inclusivity of a civil rights movement; there are these gatekeepers doling out the right to one's own sexuality; there are real problems in our public culture.

The point is, I guess it's OK to send them to the usual referrals if they ask for that, but the complaints you're hearing aren't always just newbieness. It's also that we're about half a century overdue for our Stonewall.

Love,
Concerned Community Member

Dear ConComMem:

Power play to the people, huh? Hmm. Perhaps the S-M scene lacks the inclusivity of a civil rights movement because it's not a civil rights movement. I'm sorry, but I'm just not convinced that sharing a taste for certain sensations qualifies a bunch of folks as a "people." There is such a thing as an organized S-M community, but it's naturally just a subset of all the people who do weird stuff with pleasure/pain and power, just as the queer community is a scant subset of people who have sex with their co-genderists.

There may be a certain sameness to the crowds at events, but this is within your power to change. Gatekeepers? What gatekeepers? Grab your friends and crash the gates. Has the oft-invoked Stonewall taught you nothing? Hint: it was a riot, not an act of Congress. Keep in mind, though, that while the United States guarantees you certain inalienable rights, media representation is not among them.

Love,
Andrea

SAN FRANCISCO BAY GUARDIAN FOOD & DRINK

Wilde at heart

By Paul Reidinger

We can be fairly certain that Oscar Wilde, who as a media hound was slightly ahead of his time, would approve of a pub bearing his name — even if, as with Wilde Oscar's, a new such place in the borderland between SoMa and the Mission, the name is wittily (beg pardon) inverted. And surely he would like Wilde Oscar's signage, which features a notably flattering likeness of the writer, patron saint of long-haired, sexually ambiguous scribblers, whose line persists to this day, if I may drop a 16-ton hint. Wilde's black teeth are tastefully omitted, his pocked skin decorously smoothed. Such is the dignifying, if not dignified, art of portraiture.

Lest we forget, Wilde was Irish (born in Dublin), and his mastery of the English tongue was probably at least as irritating to the revenge-minded English as was his widely remarked feasting with rent-boy panthers. One reminder of Wilde's Celtic roots is his fabulous full name — Oscar Fingal O'Flahertie Wills Wilde, so memorably intoned by James Mason, as the prosecuting barrister Carson, in the movie The Trials of Oscar Wilde — set in gold letters above Wilde Oscar's door. (Other Wilde witticisms and epigrams are similarly recorded elsewhere on the forest green-and-burgundy walls.)

Another is the food, which is noticeably though not utterly Irish. And I am not just talking about the Harp beer on tap, though that is lovely, nor the profusion of potatoes — mostly, and unevenly, fried. I am talking about, say, the Irish bacon in the BLT ($7.25), Irish bacon being, like Canadian bacon, far meatier and less fatty than our pork-belly kind. I am not talking about, although I very much welcomed, the soft, bright green slices of avocado that also found their way into the sandwich, nor the garlic mayonnaise, which gave it a powerful, savory — almost Gallic — kick.

I might be talking about the Bosie burger ($8.25), a large and well-seasoned lump of ground beef topped with cheddar cheese and griddled onions and served on a mustard-smearred bun. Bosie, of course — Lord Alfred Douglas — was the nubile toff who, in the name of ruinous love, helped Wilde self-destruct. But the burger, despite a provocative name, seemed to be untainted by any sort of disgrace, and Bosie himself is otherwise uncommemorated on menu or wall — odd given the scale of his importance in the Wilde myth.

As Ireland was conquered by England in the 17th century — Cromwell, Drogheda, et cetera, a peripheral if bloody venue in Europe's long Protestant-Catholic struggle — it is natural to expect English influences in the cooking. And there they are. The kitchen offers a strong version of fish-and-chips ($8.50), with tubular lengths of breaded, oil-bronzed fish (cod? haddock?) that break up nicely for dipping in the ramekin of tartar sauce. Also on the side: a heap of carrot coleslaw and a pile of the sometimes limp, sometimes crisp, sometimes salted, sometimes not, fries.

A chicken curry ($8.50) — a wealth of shredded meat in a goeey sauce the color of parched earth — sounded another note of English cooking, this time of bad English cooking. There are few curries of any sort I don't like, but this one tasted a bit too strongly of canned curry powder for my taste. Per the law of unintended consequences, the limp fries on the side of the plate shone with a glory that would not otherwise have been theirs if the curry had been a bit fresher.

Of course there are plenty of American dishes on the menu, too: a creamy, potatoey clam chowder with plenty of clams ($3.25 for a cup), a quesadilla ($5.75) heavily — perhaps too heavily — fortified with raw onions, and a chocolate mousse cake ($3.75) of cloudlike lightness.

But Wilde Oscar's strongest appeal is surely its ambience. It is essentially a gay pub: an institution common in Europe but little known on these shores. Our gay bars come in many flavors — cruise, dance, country-western, leather, to name just a few — and we are equally blessed, if that is the word, with gay restaurants, but the sort of welcoming, low-intensity camaraderie that bathes Wilde Oscar's is a much harder atmosphere to come by in this country. To be able to drink, flirt, talk, eat, and listen to fabulous '80s songs — we carbonated ourselves by being able immediately to identify "I Ran," "Safety Dance," and "Just What I Needed" — all at the same time and under one roof, is the sort of mellow experience that sooner or later will appeal to even the wildest at heart. ♦

Wilde Oscar's. 1900 Folsom (at 15th St.), S.F. (415) 621-7145. Mon.-Fri., 11 a.m.-9 p.m.; Sat.-Sun., 10 a.m.-9 p.m. Full bar. MasterCard, Visa. Can get noisy. Wheelchair accessible.

When Irish eyes are smilin': Anne Murray, left, and Trish Doran of Wilde Oscar's have some fish (and chips) fried just for you, along with a proper pint of Guinness.

The story of Z

California has long claimed zinfandel as its own — a (possibly) native grape whose bottled issue included, in the 1970s, high-alcohol red wines best suited for drinking with takeout pizza and, in the 1980s, blush wines ("white" zinfandels) that strongly appealed to people who didn't really like wine.

It's been mainly in the last decade that zin has begun to be taken seriously by wine makers and wine drinkers alike. And it's been in the same interval, ironically, that the story of its being native to California has been debunked as myth. That story is ably told by Charles L. Sullivan in Zinfandel: A History of a Grape and Its Wine (California, $24.95).

Sullivan dispenses with the native-California business straight off. "Zinfandel" was being discussed by viticulturists on the East Coast in the 1820s; there is evidence it had been brought there from Austria. The vine then took to the westward roads in the 1840s, carried by fortune seekers who'd heard tell of gold in California.

But the New World story of zinfandel isn't as compelling as the Old World story, a blend of chance observation, gumshoe detective work in sun-bleached Adriatic locales, and DNA top-gunnery.

"By the late 1980s," Sullivan writes, "Italian viticultural specialists were becoming interested in the question" whether primitivo, a vine long cultivated in Puglia (the heel of the Italian boot), was in fact zinfandel. The vines were considered to be indistinguishable in appearance, and the wines produced from their fruit were also powerfully similar in their bewitching blend of berry flavors and pepperiness.

DNA analysis has proved that zin and primitivo are the same vine. But primitivo is not native to Puglia; as Sullivan suggests, its antecedents can be found on Adriatic islands near Split on the Dalmatian coast. Whether the grape we know as zinfandel originated on those islands is a question we will probably never have an answer for, because cuttings of wine-producing grapes have been moved around the Mediterranean for millennia.

Some years ago, approaching Marseilles by ship, I was struck by the landscape: dry, gravelly hills, with some stubble of chaparral, tumbling nearly straight into the blue water. Greece looks like that, and parts of Spain, and Israel too. No doubt the Greek explorers who founded Marseilles — Massalia — in the sixth century BCE noticed the similarity to their native land; no doubt they supposed that grape vines successfully cultivated in Greece would also thrive in the south of France — and in Puglia, and all around the Mediterranean basin. Even today there is a distinctive quality of berries and pepper in the ordinary red table wines of Greece, Italy, France, Spain. Zinfandels? Close enough.

Fear of flying

And then I wonder why my dreams are all transportational in nature! I drive to Ohio and back. I drive to Idaho. Drove to Utah once to look at a car, I'm not proud to admit, and didn't buy it. November I'm going on tour — East Coast and back. I drive because, like Madden, I'm afraid to fly. And at night I dream about flying because I'm afraid to fly. On the rare occasions when I don't dream about flying, I take the train. Or I drive, like in real life. And those dreams are boring and I sleep good, those nights.

I hate when people write about their dreams. I'll write about one dream, and then it's all-you-can-eat buffet time in Berkeley.

In this dream I'm not in the airplane; I'm in the middle of a stadium, standing on solid ground with a lot of other people, watching. I'm part of the crowd, enjoying the oddly macabre spectacle of a small, single-engine plane tethered to the stadium trying to fly away from the stadium and not being able to, of course, because it's tethered to the stadium. Big stadium. Thick, strong rope. Like a chained dog, if you'll pardon the metaphor within the metaphor, the plane repeatedly roars forth and falls back, the crowd cathartically imagined grooving to the futility of it all, the persistent pilot's collectively imagined mounting frustration. Then I have an idea: if he can cut the rope with the propeller ... and this is obviously a trick pilot; even as I think the thought, the plane goes nose down into a temporary dive, slackening the rope, and snips it with the propeller. The crowd gasps. Freedom is a possibility. The plane wins! It's loose, except that in the act of cutting the rope the engine has stalled out, and the pilot is now forced to make a crash landing — which, in revenge for the crowd's sadistic, lusty spectatorship, he chooses to make inside the stadium, taking out with him a big bunch of people, but not me.

As usual, I live to tell about it. Crawdad thinks it means I should get over my fear of flying, as it's obviously not all that much safer down here on solid ground. But she has a vested interest: she loves to travel, and not just by car, which (she argues) is a better way to get to Idaho than to Europe, or Thailand.

My therapist, who is objective and vested interestless, interprets the dream to mean I need to keep going to therapy. This in spite of the apparent subconsciously felt futility of trying to access some deeply embedded inner kernel of realness, or personal liberation, by sitting around in a small room talking about it instead of, say, smoking more pot. Cutting my ties to the past amounts to a psychic disaster, blah blah blah feelings blah blah blah responsibility.

Yeah, I can't help thinking, but it wasn't me in that plane.

"Then who was it?" the therapist wants to know, eyebrows arched.

Plain as the noses on all of our faces ... And a chorus of cross-eyed Cheap Eats readers responds in unison with me: the 49ers, who will struggle mightily to make the playoffs, it has been revealed (just in time for this year's Pro Football Preview column), only to crash and burn, killing many loyal fans in the process. But not me.

I live to tell about it, as always. Like yesterday after playing music right through lunch, me and Yo-Yo and a lucky-to-be-alive stand-up bass player I won't name on account of laziness went speeding and screaming up San Pablo Avenue from Oakland to Albany, bending yellow lights and breaking every traffic law in the books, that's how hungry we were.

Yo-Yo was steering us toward the best Japanese noodle place in the Bay Area, but, to our dismay and to the danger of drivers everywhere, they're closed on Mondays. The second-best Japanese restaurant on San Pablo, to continue the nightmare, doesn't open for dinner until five. It was four, and none of us had had lunch. Some of us hadn't even had breakfast.

We zoomed back toward Berkeley and Bacheeso's Garden Bistro, a buffet place Yo-Yo's also been talking up. They serve breakfast and lunch stuff — eggs, sandwiches, pasta dishes — but we were there for the buffet ($6.80).

Good things: beef kebab, green beans and okra, celery-rhubarb chicken, stuffed tomatoes, all kinds of salads ... I think the best thing I had in my three times through (in about as many minutes) was roasted red and yellow peppers with sesame seeds on them.

Bad things: roast turkey (dry), and the chicken-and-rice patties (just bad).

A lot of things were cold and/or crusty and/or dry. Get there earlier than we did.

It's got a big fruity mural, nice tile floor, chairs on wheels, an out-of-order fountain in the middle of the place, and a couple of indoor street lights. Dreamy, in other words. ♦

BEST NEW RESTAURANT 2002

FOOD & DRINK

table ready by stephanie rosenbaum

Summer sweet

Contrary to popular belief, a restaurant critic's life is not an endless cascade of fantastic meals. Mostly, it's a lot of copycat salmon, arugula salad bitter as remorse, panna cotta moon white and jiggly. You can't predict when a dish will jump out at you, so much so that you'll go back for it again and again, try to re-create it at home, buy the restaurant's cookbook, or simply file it in the pantheon of personal epiphanies. I still hope that someday Bay Wolf will bring back an autumn special of buckwheat ravioli filled with goat cheese, the nutty pillows smothered with beets and walnuts. I muse over the lemongrass and coconut mus-sels at Oakland's otherwise Italian-ish Spettro, which made me want to get down on all fours and lick the bowl like a dog. I'll never be able to reproduce the ethereal turnip soup at the Martini House in St. Helena, which captured the essence of winter in an earthy froth. My pizza will never have the perfect, oily crunch of Arizmen-di's sourdough pizza crust.

Now that September's here, and with it, the long-awaited, basking heat of the season, I've been dreaming about the most flavor-drenched, sweet-salty foods I can find. Ravishingly multihued tomatoes, swinging from suave to acid and back again. Intensely perfumed melons, deep orange and yellow, begging for lime. The swift crunch of a knife going through the green skin of the coldest, ruby-hearted water-melon. A watermelon agua fresca at La Taqueria, pulling the sandy bits of melon up through a straw in between bites of a veggie taco with extra tomatillo sauce and a hefty slather of avocado. Melons are the true beauties of late summer, holding all the season's musky heat in their sunset-colored, dripping flesh. Everyone goes on and on about the beauty of figs, their sexy plumpness, their sticky, seed-crunched pulp. And yes, they're nice. But there's no tang to a fig, no snap of acid to pique your appetite. It's the same with white peaches: delectable, but not piquant. And in summer, piquant is what you need, something that rolls like a breeze over your tongue. Ceviche, gazpacho, lemonade, the tangy brine of seafood. I'm still charmed by a salad I had at the Chickenbone Cafe, on a hot July night in Brooklyn. The chef, who'd trained at the French Laundry, built a crisscross stack of watermelon batons topped with whorls of grilled squid. Interspersed were frilled shreds of mint and cilantro, salty bits of feta, and down at the bottom, tiny, tiny sweet-sour cubes of pickled watermelon rind. It was delicious, and also witty: watermelon two ways, both of them unexpected.

Melon — watermelon especially — goes better with salt and savory than you might expect. With something salty, and something hot, and something savory (what the flavor experts call umami, the Japanese term for the sort of savoriness you find in soy sauce or Parmesan cheese), you can fill out almost the whole flavor pantheon in one dish. And the heat doesn't have to come from pepper: the bite of a red onion will work, in a Greek-style salad of watermelon, onion, and feta drizzled with olive oil and showered with mint. Or the classic, unbeatable combination of ripe cantaloupe and sheer slices of prosciutto. Grilled or boiled shrimp on skewers with cubes of pale green honeydew, dunked in lime juice and sprinkled with red pepper. But my favorite melon salad ever comes from a dish I've had — and had again, whenever I could — at Ponzu. Asian fusion is a tricky genre; go too authentic and you'll leave your clientele wondering why they didn't just keep walking up Eddy Street for the same thing at a Formica table for half the price; go too Western and you miss the point. At Ponzu, though, the Bangkok melon salad (originated by former executive chef John Beardsley, now at Le Colonial) is something I'd eat all summer long. At a dinner with a friend a couple of years ago, we ordered one as an appetizer, and then, at the end of the meal, another one as dessert: full circle, as round as a melon, and both times we ate the whole thing.

Bangkok Melon Salad

- 1/4 cup water
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 tsp grated fresh ginger
- 1 stalk lemongrass, finely chopped
- 2 kaffir lime leaves, thinly sliced (or grated zest of 1 lime)
- 1/2 cup each lemon juice, lime juice, and Vietnamese fish sauce
- 1 fresh red chile, minced
- 1 lb each cantaloupe and honeydew, peeled and cubed
- 1/2 a small watermelon, peeled and diced
- 1/2 bunch Thai basil leaves
- grated zest of 1 lemon
- 1/2 cup toasted, chopped peanuts

Combine water, sugar, ginger, lemongrass, and lime leaves in a medium pot and bring to a simmer. Turn off heat and let steep for 10 minutes. Strain, discard- ing solids. Add juices, fish sauce, and chile and chill. Toss cubed melons with basil leaves and lemon zest. Add dressing to taste. Sprinkle with chopped peanuts just before serving. ❖

FOOD & DRINK take that by gabriel roth Injera report

A friend's father, a middle-aged Midwesterner, remembers the first time he tasted spaghetti. I can only imagine crossing such a vast frontier; I wonder what it felt like. Once he'd surmounted the instinctive fear of strangeness — once the adult part of his brain had insisted that the resemblance to worms was purely coincidental — he must have struggled briefly with technique: someone must have shown him how to twirl the noodles on his fork, how to suck up stray strands. Once he'd learned to get the food into his mouth, how did it taste? And did that experience — the culinary equivalent of stout Cortez's first glimpse of the Pacific — presage a lifetime of such discoveries? Did he foresee, with that first bite, that modernity would deliver to his doorstep one centuries-old gastronomic tradition after another, like kings bearing exotic gifts? What did he think of Chinese?

Societies supposedly pass through three stages, from primitive to civilized to decadent. (The United States, runs the joke, is the first to skip directly from step one to step three.) Immigrant cuisines pass through such stages too. That first Italian meal my friend's father ate: I'll bet the noodles were overcooked and mushy, the sauce sweet as ketchup. And I'll bet it didn't matter at all, because tasting something new is perhaps the greatest pleasure eating has to offer.

Ethiopian food has been widely available in some U.S. cities for a couple decades, give or take, but it still has the kick of unfamiliarity, for me at least: it's not just another entry in the familiar litany of "do you feel like Mexican/Chinese/Indian/Thai?" An Ethiopian meal is served family-style on a big round piece of flat bread, called injera. The bread is spongy and has a slightly sourdough flavor; you tear pieces off and use them to pick up the food with a pinching gesture. The novelty of this method, and of the distinctive flavors — the spicy berbere curries and the softer turmeric-based dishes — has not yet worn off. And because of that, my appreciation of Ethiopian food has been eager and relatively unsophisticated. As long as the beef isn't too stringy, I've never been moved to make fine distinctions between one Ethiopian restaurant and another.

Until now. The first time a friend took me to Oakland's Café Colucci, a month ago, I learned the difference between Ethiopian food and really good Ethiopian food. It's a distinction that never would have occurred to me before. Ethiopian food in the United States, in other words, is making its way from primitivism into its civilized phase.

Since then, whenever I'm eating at East Bay friends' houses, I'm pushing for Ethiopian, offering to pick it up and bring it over. When you get Ethiopian to go, it's hard to get it out of the Styrofoam containers, which are padded with injera, and onto a plate. Eating straight out of the to-go tray works fine.

The things I insist on getting every time are gomen be sega and shrimp tibs. Gomen be sega is tender beef and collard greens, sautéed in butter that's been spiced with garlic, ginger, and onions. It won't surprise anyone to learn that garlic, ginger, and onions cooked up in butter is delicious: on paper it sounds like the Platonic ideal of delicious. What is remarkable is that the flavor of this buttery deliciousness is distinctively Ethiopian: why hasn't the rest of the world been making this? The collard greens, which often dominate dishes with their bitterness, have been softened, tempered — civilized. The shrimp tibs, meanwhile, is a spicy, tangy shrimp and vegetable sauté that's essentially the greatest stir-fry you've ever eaten.

For most cuisines, the primitive stage is characterized by heavy and often sugary sauces poured indiscriminately over various things. Most Ethiopian restaurants will serve you chicken or beef smothered in berbere sauce: a thick red sauce made from a paste of spices and herbs, blending the sharp (cayenne pepper, paprika) and the cool (fenugreek, cardamom). Until I started going to Café Colucci, that was fine with me, because berbere sauce is unlike anything else, and when I'm presented with novelty and deliciousness at once, I'm not going to get all upset about the failure of the constituent parts of a dish to cohere into a unified whole or any crap like that.

But Café Colucci has made that simplistic enthusiasm unsustainable. The berbere sauce is deeper and richer, blending the ingredients in a more complex way. The beef and chicken are more flavorful. The doro alicha — big pieces of chicken in a mild, creamy sauce — is so plainly about chicken, about what kinds of tastes it can absorb into itself, that the primitivistic idea of chicken as a mere vehicle for some unrelated flavor comes to seem unacceptably crude.

This is civilization's real discontent: as we cultivate new and heightened sensibilities, more refined ways to see and hear and taste the world, the old pleasures lose their power. Café Colucci has educated my palate, civilized me, and now I have to go to Oakland when I crave Ethiopian; the restaurants on my side of the bay have lost their luster. When we gain sophistication, we lose our simple thrill at the shock of the new. With every gift, a price. Worth paying, in this case. ♦

Critic's choice

The Public brings a Tuscan-tinged, Delfina-ish menu to a splendid, multilevel space in a grand old brick building. Youthful but well-informed staff, incomparable chocolate bread pudding. (P.R., 7/03) 1489 Folsom (at 11th St.), S.F. 552-3065. California/Mediterranean, D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Recently reviewed

Moshi Moshi serves a full palette of Japanese standards, from sushi to tempura to immense bowls of udon and near-udon. An ideal spot for neighborhood watching. (P.R., 7/03) 2092 Third St. (at 18th St.), S.F. Japanese, L/D, $, AE/MC/V.

Soluna Cafe and Lounge can't quite replace Stars, but it does have enough style for the power-lunch crowd while offering tasty Mediterranean food at a fair price for everyone else. The dinner menu consists largely of California-influenced mezes. (P.R., 5/03) 272 McAllister (at Larkin), S.F. 621-2200. California/Mediterranean, L/D, $, MC/V. Tallula gives a Franco-Cal bistro spin to the ingredients and flavors of south Asia, and the results are spectacular. It could be the Castro's first true food-destination restaurant. Lots of stairs to contend with in the vertiginous old space. (P.R., 7/03) 4230 18th St. (at Diamond), S.F. 437-6722. California/Indian, D, $$, AE/MC/V.

On the cheap: Mexican

Panchita's No. 3 plays a much needed role, as a kind of Salvadoran-Mexican bistro or taverna. The food is straightforward and strong and presented with just a bit of flair; the setting shows small touches of elegance. (P.R., 8/02) 3115 22nd St. (at Capp), S.F. 821-6660. Salvadoran/Mexican, L/D, $, MC/V. Papalote Mexican Grill relieves our Mexican favorites of much of their fat and calories without sacrificing flavor. Surprisingly excellent soyriso, aguas frescas; sexily varied crowd. (P.R., 11/02) 3409 24th St. (at Valencia), S.F. 970-8815. Mexican, L/D, $, AE/MC/V. Tia Margarita is an old-style Mexican restaurant with big servings and big flavor. Go hungry. (P.R., 4/03) 300 19th Ave. (at Clement), S.F. 752-9274. Mexican, D, $, MC/V.

Featured neighborhood: SoMa

Asiasf Priscilla, Queen of the Desert meets Asian-influenced tapas at this amusingly surreal lounge. The drag-queen burlesque spectacle draws a varied audience that's a show in itself. (P.R., 9/98) 201 Ninth St. (at Howard), S.F. 255-2742. Fusion, D, $, AE/DC/DISC/MC/V. Bacar means "wine goblet," and its wine menu is extensive — and affordable. Chef Arnold Wong's eclectic American-global food plays along nicely. (P.R., 1/01) 448 Brannan (at fourth), S.F. 904-4100. American, D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Basil A serene, upscale oasis amid the industrial supply warehouses, Basil offers California-influenced Thai cuisine that's lively and creative. (S.R., 3/95) 1175 Folsom (at Eighth St.), S.F. 552-8999. Thai, L/D, $, AE/MC/V.

Big Nate's Barbecue is pretty stark inside — mostly linoleum arranged around a pair of massive brick ovens. But the hot sauce will make you sneeze. (P.R., 7/99) 1665 Folsom (at 12th St.), S.F. 861-4242. Barbecue, L/D, $, MC/V.

Blizou Chef-owner Loretta Keller's Provençal-influenced menu is big on flavor. This restaurant is sure of itself; there is no overreaching. (P.R., 9/99) 598 Fourth St. (at Brannan), S.F. 543-2222. California, L/D, $$$, AE/MC/V. Buzz 9 Cafe is snugly stylish (calm green walls, votive candles), and the first-rate California menu has a glory-days, 1980s whiff. (P.R., 5/01) 139 Eighth St. (at Minna), S.F. 255-8783. California, L/D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Le Charm is the perfect spot to settle into a padded banquette and order wine and lamb chops and lovely little crème caramels. (S.R., 2/98) 315 Fifth St. (at Folsom), S.F. 546-6128. French, L/D, $$, MC/V.

Chez Spencer brings Laurent Katgely's precise French cooking into the rustic-industrial urban cathedral that once housed Citizen Cake. Get something from the wood-burning oven. (P.R., 7/02) 82 14th St. (at Folsom) S.F. 864-2191. French, BR/L/D, $$, MC/V.

Fly Trap Restaurant captures a bit of that old-time San Francisco feel, from the intricate plaster ceiling to the straightforward menu: celery Victor, grilled salmon filet with beurre blanc. A good lunchtime spot. (P.R., 1/02) 606 Folsom (at Second St.), S.F. 243-0580. American, L/D, $$, AE/DC/MC/V.

Hawthorne Lane comes about as close to restaurant perfection as is possible in this world. The California cooking shows marked Asian influences; the mutedly elegant decor is welcoming, not stuffy. Sublime service. (P.R., 8/01) 22 Hawthorne Lane (between Second and Third Sts. at Howard), S.F. 777-9779. California, L/D, $$$, MC/V.

Hotel Utah Saloon brings Joanna Karlinsky's fresh, casual California cooking to a landmark venue for live indie music. Practically everything is house-made, and the chocolate chip cookies are big enough to play Frisbee with. (P.R., 4/02) 500 Fourth St. (at Bryant), S.F. 563-6300. California, L/D, $, MC/V.

India Garden indeed has a lovely garden and an excellent lunch buffet that does credit to south Asian standards. (P.R., 2/03) 1261 Folsom (at Ninth St.), S.F. 626-2798. Indian, L/D, $, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Julie's Kitchen offers a lunchtime buffet with, literally, a bit of everything, from roast turkey to sushi, with plenty of interesting items in between. (P.R., 2/03) 680 Eighth St. (at Townsend), S.F. 431-1255. Eclectic, B/L, $, DC/MC/V.

Left Coast Cafe brings a breath of California freshness to the otherwise slightly antiseptic atrium of the Dolby Building. Healthy sandwiches (tuna, hummus), a decent Caesar, good mom-style cookies and brownies. (P.R., 10/00) 999 Brannan (at 9th), S.F. 522-0232. California, B/L, $, cash only.

LuLu defines the modern California restaurant. Many dishes acquire a heart-swelling smokiness from the oven — a plate of portobello mushrooms, say, with soft polenta and mascarpone butter. (P.R., 7/99) 816 Folsom (at Fourth St.), S.F. 495-5775. Mediterranean, L/D, $$$, AE/MC/V.

Maya is like a good French restaurant serving elegant food that tastes Mexican. There are unforgettable tastes here: corn kernels steeped in vanilla, lovely grilled pork tenderloin served with a pipian sauce of pumpkinseed and tamarind. (P.R., 5/99) 303 Second St. (at Folsom), S.F. 543-6709. Mexican, L/D, $$$, AE/DC/DISC/MC/V.

Sushi Groove South continues the westward march of hipsterdom through SoMa. The food — traditional sushi augmented by quietly stylized fusion dishes — is spectacular. The setting — a candlelit grotto abrim with black-clad young — is charged with high romance. (P.R., 12/00) 1516 Folsom (at 11th), S.F. 503-1950. Japanese/sushi, L/D, $, AE/DC/MC/V.

Vino e Cucina offers a pleasantly oasislike setting and solid Italian food — with the occasional pleasant surprise — on a gritty stretch of Third Street. (P.R., 3/03) 489 Third St. (at Brannan), S.F. 543-6962. Italian, L/D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Whiz Wit means meat and cheese, as in Philly cheese steaks. If you can deal with that, you'll love this place. Lighter options, too. (P.R., 8/01) 1525 Folsom (at 11th St.), S.F. 558-9200. American, L/D, $, MC/V.

XYZ joins the pantheon of fabulous restaurants in the city's hotels. Lusty California cooking glows like a campfire in a cool (if slightly deracinated) urban setting. (P.R., 3/03) 181 Third St. (at Howard), S.F. 817-7836. California, B/BR/L/D, $$$, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Downtown, Embarcadero

B44 brings Daniel Olivella's Catalan cooking to al fresco-friendly Belden Place. The salt cod-studded menu is stronger in first than main dishes. Frenchy desserts. (P.R., 3/00) 44 Belden Place (near Pine), S.F. 986-6287. Catalan, L/D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Bix radiates an unmistakable aura of American power and luxury, Jazz Age style. The food is simply splendid. (P.R., 8/99) 56 Gold (at Sansome), S.F. 433-6300. American, L/D, $$$, AE/DC/DISC/MC/V.

Boulevard has a casually elegant art nouveau decor. The food, too, is hot. (Staff) 1 Mission (at Stuart), S.F. 543-6084. American, L/D, $$$, AE/DC/DISC/MC/V.

Cosmopolitan Cafe seems like a huge Pullman car. The New American menu emphasizes heartiness. (P.R., 9/00) 121 Spear (at Howard), S.F. 543-4001. American, L/D, $$, AE/DC/MC/V.

Havell resembles the hash line from some Bollywood remake of *M*A*S*H*, but the "Hindu vegetarian cuisine" is spicy and fresh. (P.R., 1/03) 35 Sixth St. (at Market), S.F. 348-1381. Vegetarian/Indian, B/L, $, MC/V.

Jeanty at Jack's introduces Philippe Jeanty's earthy French cooking into the vertiginous old Jack's space, and the result is leisurely fabulousness, at least at dinnertime. At lunch, the pace is more harried, the prices too high. (P.R., 4/02) 615 Sacramento (at Montgomery), S.F. 693-0941. French, L/D, $$$, AE/MC/V. Ponzu opened early in 2000 but is likely to be remembered as one of the year's best new restaurants. The décor manages to be warm, bright, and modern without going over the top. (P.R., 2/00) 401 Taylor (at O'Farrell), S.F. 775-7979. Asian, B/D, $$, MC/V.

North Beach, Chinatown

Da Flora advertises Venetian specialties, but notes from Central Europe (veal in paprika cream sauce) and points east (whiffs of nutmeg) creep into other fine dishes. (Staff) 701 Columbus (at Filbert), S.F. 981-4664. Italian, D, $$, MC/V.

Enrico's Sidewalk Cafe remains a classic see-and-be-seen part of the North Beach scene. The full bar and extensive menu of tapas, pizzas, pastas, and grills make dropping in at any hour a real treat. (Staff) 504 Broadway (at Kearny), S.F. 982-6223. Mediterranean, L/D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Gondola captures the varied flavors of Venice and the Veneto in charmingly low-key style.

FOOD & DRINK

Eat Here Now

The main theme is the classic one of simplicity, while service strikes just the right balance between efficiency and warmth. (P.R., 2/01) 15 Columbus (at Montgomery), S.F. 956-5528. Italian, L/D, S, MC/V.

House of Nanking never fails to garner raves from restaurant reviewers and Bay Guardian readers alike. Chinatown ambience, great food, good prices. (Best Of, 1994) 919 Kearny (at Columbus), S.F. 421-1429. Chinese, L/D, C. Moose's is famous for the Mooseburger but the rest of the menu is comfortably sophisticated. The crowd is moneyed but not showy and definitely not nouveau. (Staff) 1652 Stockton (at Union), S.F. 989-7800. American, BR/L/D, SS, AE/DC/MC/V.

Pena Pacha Mama offers organic Bolivian cuisine as well as weekly performances of Andean song and dance. Dine on crusted lamb and yucca frita while watching a genuine flamenco performance in this intimate setting. (Charles Russo, 7/01), 1630 Powell (at Green), S.F. 646-0018. Bolivian, BR/D, SS, AE/MC/V.

Rose Pistola At the lively and upscale Rose Pistola, Italian is the cuisine on the table. There's plenty to choose from on this extensive menu — from small tapaslike treats like house-cured fish or goat cheese and bresola crostini to roasted quail and crackling-crusted shrimp pizza. (Staff) 532 Columbus (at Green), S.F. 399-0499. Italian, L/D, SS, AE/DC/MC/V.

Nob Hill, Russian Hill

Alborz looks more like a hotel restaurant than a den of Persian cuisine, but there are flavors here — of barberry and dried lime, among others — you won't easily find elsewhere. (P.R., 8/02) 1245 Van Ness (at Sutter), S.F. 440-4321. Persian, L/D, S, MC/V.

Crustacean is famous for its roast Dungeness crab; the rest of the "Euro/Asian" menu is refreshingly Asian in emphasis. (P.R., 2/99) 1475 Polk (at California), S.F. 776-2722. Fusion, L/D, SS, AE/MC/V.

Le Petit Robert offers classy French cooking as a wealth of small plates, along with a few larger ones, in a setting that's at once spacious and warm. Not cheap, but good value. (P.R., 11/01) 2300 Polk (at Green), S.F. 922-8100. French, L/D, SS, MC/V.

Wasabi and Ginger looks to become a popular neighborhood spot. The sushi is first rate, but the great stuff on the menu is cooked: buttery-tender beef short ribs and a seafood-miso soup served in a teapot. (P.R., 1/01) 2299 Van Ness (at Vallejo), S.F. 345-1368. Japanese, L/D, S, MC/V.

Zarzuela's rich selection of truly delicious tapas and full meals make it a neighborhood favorite. (Staff) 2000 Hyde (at Union), S.F. 346-0800. Tapas, D, SS, DISC/MC/V.

Civic Center, Tenderloin

Ananda Fuara serves a distinctly Indian-influenced vegetarian menu in the sort of calm surroundings that are increasingly the exception to the rule. (P.R., 2/00) 1298 Market (at Ninth St.), S.F. 621-1994. Vegetarian, L/D, C, cash only.

Chutney combines elements of college-town haunt and California bistro. The Pakistani-Indian food is fresh, bright, spicy, and cheap. (P.R., 4/03) 511 Jones (at O'Farrell), S.F. (931-5541). Indian/Pakistani, L/D, C.

Gyro King has that Istanbul feeling: lots of kebabs and gyros, hummus, dolma, eggplant salad, and of course baklava fistikli for dessert. It's all cheap, and it makes for a good, quick Civic Center lunch. (P.R., 2/02) 25 Grove (at Larkin), S.F. 621-8313. Turkish/Mediterranean, B/L/D, C, MC/V.

Max's Opera Cafe Huge food is the theme here, from softball-size matzo balls to towering desserts. Your basic Jewish deli. (Staff) 601 Van Ness (at Golden Gate), S.F. 771-7300. American, L/D, S, AE/DC/DISC/MC/V.

Olive might look like a tapas bar, but what you want are the thin-crust pizzas, the simpler the toppings the better. The small plates offer eclectic pleasures, especially the Tuscan pâté and beef satay with peanut sauce. (P.R., 10/02) 743 Larkin (at O'Farrell), S.F. 776-9814. Pizza/eclectic, D, S, AE/DS/MC/V.

paul K offers an eastern Mediterranean menu as good as any in town. The menu accelerates smoothly all the way to dessert, where a cardamom fritter casts new light on our old friend the doughnut. (P.R., 4/00) 199 Gough (at Oak), S.F. 552-7132. Mediterranean, D, SS, AE/DC/MC/V.

Hayes Valley

Destino reweaves traditional Peruvian flavors into a tapestry of extraordinary vividness and style, and the storefront interior has been given a golden glow that would have satisfied the most restless conquistador. (P.R., 6/00) 1815 Market (at Guerrero), S.F. 552-4451. Peruvian, D, SS, MC/V.

Fritz serves first-rate Belgian fries, beer, crepes, and sandwiches in an art-house atmosphere. If the noise overwhelms, take refuge in the lovely rear garden. (P.R., 12/01) 579 Hayes (at Laguna), S.F. 864-7654; also at Ghirardelli Sq., S.F. 928-3886. Belgian, B/L/D, S, AE/CB/DC/DISC/MC/V.

Hayes Street Grill still offers a workable formula: the best fish, prepared with conservative expertise and offered with a choice of sauce and excellent pommes frites. An old, reliable friend. (P.R., 4/99) 320 Hayes (at Franklin), S.F. 863-5545. Seafood, L/D, SS, AE/DC/DISC/MC/V.

Suppenküche has a Busvan for Bargains, butcher-block look that gives context to its German cuisine. If you like schnitzel, brats, roasted potatoes, eggs, cheese, cucumber salad, cold cuts, and cold beer, you'll love it here. (P.R., 5/00) 601 Hayes (at Laguna), S.F. 252-9289. German, BR/D, S, AE/MC/V.

Zuni Cafe The old standbys are reliable, but the best dishes are Italian in their simplicity and pureness. (P.R., 7/99) 1658 Market (at Franklin), S.F. 552-2522. California, B/L/D, SS, AE/MC/V.

Castro, Noe Valley, Glen Park

Alcatrazes brings Chef "Gator" Glenn Thompson's first-rate California-creole cuisine to the heart of Noe Valley. Excellent gumbo, crab cakes (with vanilla bean aioli), bread-pudding desserts; deft service. (P.R., 3/02) 4024 24th St., S.F. 401-7668. Creole, L/D, SS, MC/V.

Blue dishes up home cooking as good as any mom's, in a downtown New York environment — of mirrors, gray blue walls, and spotlights — that would blow most moms away. (P.R., 7/99) 2337 Market (at Castro), S.F. 863-2583. American, BR/L/D, S, MC/V.

Côté Sud brings a stylish breath of Provence to the Castro. The cooking reflects an unfussy elegance; service is as crisp as a neatly folded linen napkin. Nota bene: you must climb a set of steps to reach the place. (P.R., 10/02) 4238 18th St. (at Diamond), S.F. 255-6565. French, D, SS, MC/V.

Home sounds homey, and it is, at least food-wise: first-rate pot roast, macaroni and cheese, broccoli with white cheddar cheese sauce; the occasional dressier dish. The crowd has a strong clubland look. (P.R., 2/02) 2100 Market (at Church), S.F. 503-0333. New American, D, S, AE/MC/V.

Incanto sets the bar a bit higher for neighborhood Italian restaurants. Gorgeous stonework, a chapel-like wine room, and skillful cooking that ranges confidently from pastas to braised lamb shanks. (P.R., 7/02) 1550 Church (at Duncan), S.F. 641-4500. Italian, D, SS, MC/V.

Lupa, in the old Noi-Little Italy space, serves a strong pan-Italian menu with Roman accents. Service is knowledgeable and familial, the food competitive in a competitive neighborhood. (P.R., 5/03) 4109 24th St. (at Castro), S.F. 282-5872. Italian, D, SS, MC/V.

Tao Cafe exudes rich atmosphere — a beautiful two-tone green paint scheme, ceiling fans, bronze fittings — and the attractively brief menu has some smart French touches, including a Vietnamese-style beef bourguignon. Quite cheap considering the high style. (P.R., 6/02) 1000 Guerrero (at 22nd St.), S.F. 641-9955. Vietnamese, D, SS, AE/MC/V.

2223 could easily be a happening queer bar, what with all that male energy. But the American menu joins familiarity with high style, and the ambience is that of a great party where you're bound to meet somebody hot. (P.R., 10/00) 2223 Market (at Noe), S.F. 431-0692. American, BR/D, SS, AE/DC/MC/V.

FOOD & DRINK

Well Done

By Evelyn Grosvenor-Smythe

Dear Dame Evelyn,
We had some friends over for dinner the other night. Everyone got drunk and had a good time and ate like there was no tomorrow and, wouldn't you know it, when I stripped my heirloom tablecloth (it had been my mother's) from the table the next morning, I found several huge red-wine stains. I think they are probably zinfandel, or maybe petite syrah. Does it matter? I sprayed the spots with Spray-and-Wash before putting the tablecloth in the laundry, but it doesn't seem to have made any difference. The stains are still there. Is my mother's tablecloth ruined? What am I going to do the next time she comes to dinner and I have to use a different tablecloth?

Sackcloth

Ashes,
And I thought you were going to ask me about blood stains! There, too, I claim some expertise, as Sir Evelyn can attest, or could, if he were still with us.... But no matter. I gather your mother is a fastidious woman who somehow neglected to communicate to you the number-one rule of red-wine-stain removing, which is to strike while the stain is still damp. Pour salt on it, let the salt absorb the wine, and start dabbing it up with a clean cloth. I realize that, for you, this is already water, or wine, under the bridge. Red-wine stains that have been allowed to dry are a trickier matter. One possible remedy is to rewet the stain with white wine, then apply what is basically a poultice of baking soda mixed with just enough water to make a paste. If that doesn't work, try a blend of hydrogen peroxide and dish-washing liquid; I use about equal proportions. (This formula, incidentally, with some baking soda added, can help kill skunk stench if your pet is unlucky enough to get popped, as Dame Evelyn's have been over the years.) Or try borax, the tried-and-true cleaning powder. Dame Evelyn has never actually found borax at the hardware store, which apparently is the place to look for it, but then Dame Evelyn doesn't spend much time in hardware stores and is fairly fastidious to boot, thus minimizing the need. Not to criticize, needless to say.

Spotlessly,
E. G.-S. ❖

FOOD & DRINK

Haight, Cole Valley, Western Addition

All You Knead emphasizes the wonderful world of yeast — sandwiches, pizzas, etc. — in a space reminiscent of beer halls near Big 10 campuses. (P.R., 3/02) 1466 Haight (at Ashbury), S.F. 552-4550. American, B/L/D, C, MC/V.

Brother-in-Laws Bar-B-Cue always wins the "Best Barbecue" prize in our annual Best of Bay edition: the ribs, chickens, links, and brisket are smoky and succulent; the aroma sucks you in like a tractor beam. (Staff) 705 Divisadero (at Grove), S.F. 931-7427. Barbecue, L/D, S.

Fly could easily host séances, but if your only interest is food and drink you'll be happy too. Good pizzas and small plates; plenty for omnivores and vegetarians alike. Tons of sake drinks to wash it all down. (P.R., 1/03) 762 Divisadero (at Fulton), S.F. 931-4359. Mediterranean, L/D, S, AE/DC/DS/MC/V. Grandeho's Kamekio Sushi Bar Always packed, Grandeho serves up excellent sushi along with a full Japanese menu. (Staff) 943 Cole (near Carl), S.F. 759-5693. Japanese, L/D, S, AE/MC/V.

Kate's Kitchen dishes up the best scallion-cheese biscuits out west. The lines on the weekends can be long. (Staff) 471 Haight (at Fillmore), S.F. 626-3984. American, B/L, C. Sawa doesn't stint on spices or portion sizes. The platters are so full of Eritrean food as to have a kind of topography. (P.R., 4/01) 559 Divisadero (at Hayes), S.F. 614-0580. Eritrean, L/D, S, MC/V.

Tsunami Sushi and Sake Bar brings hip Japanese-style seafood to the already hip Cafe Abir complex. Skull-capped sushi chefs, hefty and innovative rolls. (P.R., 5/03) 1306 Fulton (at Divisadero), S.F. 567-7664. Japanese/sushi, D, S, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Mission, Bernal Heights, Potrero Hill

Alma means "soul," and that's what chef-owner Johnny Alamilla brings to his nuevo Latino menu. From feijoada to sechito to black cod roasted in a banana leaf, the food is unforgettable. (P.R., 10/01) 1101 Valencia (at 22nd St.), S.F. 401-8959. Nuevo Latino, D, S, MC/V.

Baraka takes the French-Spanish tapas concept, gives it a beguiling Moroccan accent — harissa, preserved lemons, merguez sausage — and the result is astonishingly good food. (P.R., 6/03) 288 Connecticut (at 18th St.), S.F. 255-0370. Moroccan/Mediterranean, L/D, S, AE/MC/V.

Bistro E Europe is probably the only place in town where you can sample the culinary flourishes of those European wanderers, the Gypsies, or, as they call themselves, Roma. A singular experience. (P.R., 8/00) 4901 Mission (at France), S.F. 469-5637. Hungarian/Gypsy, BR/D, S, cash only.

Blue Plate has a diner aura — bustle, clutter — but the Mediterranean food is stylishly flavorful. A great value. (P.R., 2/03) 3218 Mission (at 28th St.), S.F. 282-6777. Mediterranean, D, S, AE/MC/V.

Chez Papa Bistrot sits like a beret atop Potrero Hill. The food is good, the staff's French accents authentic, the crowd a lively cross-section, but the place needs a few more scuffs and quirks before it can start feeling real. (P.R., 7/02) 1401 18th St. (at Missouri), S.F. 824-8210. French, BR/L/D, S, AE/MC/V.

Emmy's Spaghetti Shack offers a tasty, inexpensive, late-night alternative to Pasta Pomodoro. The touch of human hands is everywhere evident. (P.R., 4/01) 18 Virginia (at Mission), S.F. 206-2086. Italian, D, S, cash only.

The Last Supper Club is really a trattoria, and an impressive one, from its half-lit, reddish-gold interior to its always tasty and sometimes astounding food. Don't miss the Sicilian-style ahi tartare on house-made potato chips. (P.R., 3/03) 1199 Valencia (at 23rd St.), S.F. 695-1199. Italian, BR/D, S, AE/MC/V.

Little Nepal assembles a wealth of sensory cues (satna-style blond wood, brass table services) and an Indian-influenced Himalayan cuisine into a singular experience that appeals to all of Bernal Heights and beyond, including tots in

1. Fresh tuna baked with tomato and green olives
2. Tea sandwiches and spicy wasabi peas, Samovar
3. Debut of the homemade limoncello
4. White nectarines, black plums, Fillmore-Eddy farmers' market
5. Roast Athenian chicken, with lemon and oregano

the blender

their strollers. (P.R., 6/04) 925 Cortland (at Folsom), S.F. 643-3881. Nepalese, L/D, S, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Lotus Garden offers a bowl of pho so huge and so spicy that you'll be left weeping — with joy. The rest of the menu is equally satisfying. (P.R., 6/01) 3452 Mission (at 30th), S.F. 642-1987. Vietnamese, L/D, S, AE/DC/DS/MC/V. Limón can get noisy, but the Peruvian-fusion, nuevo Latino cooking is worth suffering for. Many splendid sauces, with roast chicken for non-spice freaks. (P.R., 9/02) 3316 17th St. (at Mission), S.F. 252-0918. Peruvian/nuevo Latino, L/D, S, MC/V.

Little Baobab reminds us that creole cooking isn't just from New Orleans; the excellent (and inexpensive) food takes its influences from French island culture in the Caribbean and Indian Oceans. (P.R., 11/02) 3388 19th St. (at Mission), S.F. 643-3558. Creole, D, S, MC/V. Maharaja offers romantically half-lit pastels and great spicy food, including a fine chicken tikka masala and a dish of lamb chunks in dal. Lunch forswears the usual steam-table buffet in favor of set specials, as in a Chinese place. (P.R., 6/02) 525 Valencia (at 16th St.), S.F. 552-7901. Indian, L/D, S, MC/V.

Mission Bar and Grill looks like the sort of handsome art deco diner where you might find Dick Tracy, but the food gently incorporates Latin American and Middle Eastern elements. Prices are low, and the interior design subtly refers to the owners' previous venture, Val 21. (P.R., 5/03) 2491 Mission (at 21st St.), S.F. 285-4334. Diner/eclectic, L/D, S, AE/DS/MC/V.

Moki's Sushi and Pacific Grill serves imaginative specialty makis along with items from a pan-Asian grill in a small, bustling neighborhood spot. (Staff) 830 Cortland (at Gates), S.F. 970-9336. Japanese, D, S, AE/DC/MC/V.

Parkside serves a decent, affordable California menu — under the stars, if you like, in a spacious walled garden at the rear. (P.R., 7/01) 1600 17th St. (at Wisconsin), S.F. 503-0393. California, BR/L/D, S, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Platanos joins the Mission's Roller Derby of freshened Latino cooking with a potpourri menu of dishes from throughout the Spanish-speaking Americas. Good ceviche, an excellent chile relleno, and of course plantains every which way. (P.R., 12/02) 598 Guerrero (at 18th St.), S.F. 252-9281. Pan-Latino, D, S, AE/MC/V.

Ti Couz The menu of entrées here consists exclusively of crepes — from light snacks to full meals, from sweet to savory — served up in a bright, boisterous café environment. (Staff) 3108 16th St. (at Valencia), S.F. 252-7373. Crepes, BR/L/D, S, MC/V.

Walzwerk bills itself as an "East German" restaurant, but don't be frightened: the food is fresh, clever, tasty, and surprisingly light. The décor has a definite Cabaret edge. (P.R., 11/99) 381 S. Van Ness (at 15th), S.F. 551-7181. German, D, S, MC/V.

Marina, Pacific Heights, Laurel Heights

Bistro Yoffi offers a homey California menu in a paradise of potted plants. Splendid al fresco dining (under heat lamps) in the rear. (P.R., 8/01) 2231 Chestnut (at Pierce), S.F. 885-5133. California, L/D, S, MC/V.

Chaz doesn't look like much inside, but the display kitchen at the rear is where you're likely to see chef-owner Charles Solomon going to town. Masa's-style food at less than half the price. (P.R., 3/01) 3347 Fillmore (at Chestnut), S.F. 928-1211. California/French, D, S, AE/MC/V.

Chez Nous fills the French slot in our town's tapas derby, and it does so with imagination, panache, and surprising economy. The menu features touches from around the Mediterranean, but much of the best stuff is unmistakably Gallic. (P.R., 5/00) 1911 Fillmore (at Pine), S.F. 441-8044. French, L/D, $, MC/V.

Curbside Too, younger sibling to the Curbside Cafe, looks like a roadside greasy spoon. But come dinnertime the Mexican brunch influences melt into a sublime French saucefest. (P.R., 12/98) 2769 Lombard (at Lyon), S.F. 921-4442. French, D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Dragon Well looks like an annex of the cavernous Pottery Barn down the street, but its traditional Chinese menu is radiant with fresh ingredients and careful preparation. Prices are modest, the service swift and professional. (P.R., 9/99) 2142 Chestnut (at Pierce), S.F. 474-6888. Chinese, L/D, $, MC/V.

Eastside West fits right into the Cow Hollow scene. It's comfortably upscale, with first-rate service and stylishly relaxed Cal-American food. (P.R., 1/01) 4154 Fillmore (at Greenwich), S.F. 885-4000. California/American, BR/D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Elite Cafe A welcoming place. The menu has plenty of familiar Creole and Cajun favorites along with more typical California fare. (Staff) 2049 Fillmore (at California), S.F. 346-8668. Cajun, BR/D, $$, MC/V.

Ella's serves breakfast, lunch, and supper, but brunch is the real destination at this friendly corner eatery. (Staff) 500 Presidio (at California), S.F. 441-5669. American, B/BR/L/D, $, AE/MC/V.

Eunice's Cafe is the place to go when you'd rather have a conversation than make a big entrance. Good soups, sandwiches, pizzas, quiches, with a world of influences. (P.R., 10/02) 3336 Sacramento (at Presidio), S.F. 440-3330. Brazilian/eclectic, B/L, $, MC/V.

Kiss is tiny, industrial, not particularly Anglophonic — and serves some of the best sushi in the city. Warning: the very best stuff (from the specials menu) can be very pricey. (P.R., 10/01) 1700 Laguna (at Sutter), S.F. 474-2866. Japanese, D, $$$, MC/V.

L'Amour dans le Four gives a nice local boho twist to classic French bistro style. Many dishes from the oven. Tiny, noisy, intimate. (P.R., 9/02) 1602 Lombard (at Gough), S.F. 775-2134. French, D, $, AE/MC/V.

La Table dresses for success — lots of chicly understated fabrics on the high banquettes — and the bistro food is good if slightly nouvelle. The large dining room at the rear is plush with hidden romance. (P.R., 12/02) 3640 Sacramento (at Locust), S.F. 345-8600. French, BR/L/D (du Chef, D only), $$, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Mezes glows with sunny Greek hospitality, and the plates coming off the grill are terrific, though not huge. Bulk up with a fine Greek salad. (P.R., 6/00) 2373 Chestnut (at Divisadero), S.F. 409-7111. Greek, D, $, MC/V.

Morpho Sushi proves that there's life yet in the Union Street scene. Yuppies galore feasting on arty, not-inexpensive sushi and various cooked delectables. (P.R., 8/01) 1980 Union (at Buchanan), S.F. 447-8275. Japanese/sushi, L/D, $$, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Sunset

Cafe for All Seasons reflects the friendly vibrancy of its West Portal neighborhood. The California comfort food doesn't set off fireworks, but it's reliably good and fresh. (P.R., 5/00) 150 West Portal (at Vicente), S.F. 665-0900. California, L/D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Eldos is a cross between a brew pub and a taqueria, with a few standard American items thrown in. Fabulous chicken posole. (P.R., 9/02) 1326 Ninth Ave. (at Irving), S.F. 564-0425. Mexican/brew pub, L/D, $, AE/DC/MC/V.

Hotel is a marvel of great Japanese fare combined with efficient, accommodating service. Four types of noodles are the foundation around which swirl lively broths. (Staff) 1290 Ninth Ave. (at Irving), 753-6045. Japanese, L/D, $, AE/DC/MC/V.

Ichiban Kan Cafe serves sushi, sandwiches, burgers, teriyaki, an all-you-can-eat buffet — are you getting the picture? The winning neighborhood tone is reminiscent of Mayberry. R.E.D. (P.R., 9/01) 1500 Irving (at 16th Ave.), S.F. 566-1696. Japanese/American, L/D, $, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Marnee Thai A friendly, low-key neighborhood restaurant that just happens to serve some of the best Thai food in town. (Staff) 2225 Irving (at 23rd Ave.), S.F. 665-9500. Thai, L/D, $, AE/MC/V.

Masala means "spice mixture," and spices aplenty you will find in the south Asian menu. Be sure to order plenty of nan to sop up the sauce with. (P.R., 11/00) 1220 Ninth Ave. (at Lincoln), S.F. 566-6976. Indian/Pakistani, L/D, $, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Nan King Road Bistro laces its mostly Chinese menu with little touches from around Asia (sake sauces, Korean noodles), and the result is a spectacular saucefest. Spare, cool environment. (P.R., 10/01) 1360 Ninth Ave. (at Judah), S.F. 753-2900. Pan-Asian, L/D, $, AE/MC/V.

P.J.'s Oyster Bed Of all the U.S. regional cultures, southern Louisiana's may be the most beloved, and at P.J.'s you can taste why. (Staff) 737 Irving (at Ninth Ave.), S.F. 566-7775. Seafood, L/D, $$, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Sea Breeze Cafe looks like a dive, but the California cooking is elevated, literally and figuratively. Lots of witty salads, a rum-rich crème brûlée. (P.R., 4/03) 3940 Judah (at 43rd Ave.), S.F. 242-6022. California, BR/L/D, $$, MC/V.

Shanghai Restaurant poses the occasional issue for Anglophones, but the food, when it finally arrives, redeems the sometimes frustrating wait. Excellent Szechuan-style, spicy stuff; fine soups, seafood dishes. (P.R., 12/01) 420 Judah (at 9th Ave.), S.F. 661-7755. Chinese, L/D, $, MC/V.

Richmond

Aziza shimmers with Moroccan grace, from the pewter ewer and basin that circulates for the washing of hands to the profusion of preserved Meyer lemons in the splendid cooking. (P.R., 12/01) 5800 Geary (at 22nd Ave.), S.F. 752-2222. Moroccan, D, $$, AE/MC/V.

Chapeau! serves some of the best food in the city — at shockingly reasonable prices. The French cooking reflects as much style and imagination as any California menu. (P.R., 10/98) 1408 Clement (at 15th Ave.), S.F. 750-9787. French, D, $$, AE/DC/MC/V.

Clémentine offers comfortable sophistication at a fair price. Free valet parking. (P.R., 3/99) 126 Clement (at Second Ave.), S.F. 387-0408. French, BR/D, $$, MC/V.

Deep Blue Sushi is more peach than blue, colorwise, but the Japanese standards are prepared with care and just enough twists to make a good match with the mutedly hip decor. (P.R., 1/03) 445 Balboa (at Sixth Ave.), S.F. 933-7100. Japanese/sushi, D, $$, MC/V.

Lika combines a wine bar rich in California choices with a wealth of small plates, many rustic in origin but elegantly elaborated. First-rate (if petite) pasties. (P.R., 4/03) 1801 Clement (at 19th Ave.), S.F. 831-1800. Eclectic/California, D, $$, AE/DC/MC/V.

Melisa's deals in spicy Chinese food, and if that's what you're after, you won't mind the brutally bleak decor. Dishes bearing Melisa's name are especially tasty. (P.R., 3/03) 450 Balboa (at Sixth Ave.) S.F. 387-1680. Chinese, L/D, $, AE/MC/V.

Spices! has an exclamation point for a reason: its Chinese food, mainly Szechuan and Taiwanese, with an oasis of Shanghai-style dishes, is fabulously hot. Big young crowds, pulsing house music, a shocking orange-and-yellow paint scheme. Go prepared, leave happy. (P.R., 6/03) 294 Eighth Ave. (at Clement), S.F. 752-8884. Szechuan/Chinese, L/D, $, MC/V.

Straits Cafe has a slightly campy faux-tropical decor, but its Singaporean menu is a kaleidoscope of mingled satisfactions; masterful deployment of unusual ingredients all the way to a dessert of rice pudding in palm sugar syrup. (P.R., 8/99) 3300 Geary (at Parker), S.F. 668-1783. Singaporean, L/D, $, AE/DC/MC/V.

Thai Time proves that good things come in little packages. The food is tremendous. (P.R., 9/00) 315 Eighth Ave. (at Clement), S.F. 831-3663. Thai, L/D, $, AE/MC/V.

Bayview, Hunters Point, and south

Cafe Lola serves a great burger, with a beautiful view across the water to Oakland. Good fries, too, and all-around good juju. (D.L., 3/02) 702 Innes (at Earl), S.F. 282-8091. American, BR/L, $.

Cliff's Bar-B-Q and Seafood Some things Cliff's got going for him: excellent mustard greens, just drenched in flavorfulness; and barbecued you-name-it. Brisket. Rib tips. Hot links. Pork ribs. Beef ribs. Baby backs. And then there're fried chickens and, by way of health food, fried fishes. (D.L., 2/98) 2177 Bayshore (at Blanken), S.F. 330-0736. Barbecue, L/D, $, AE/DC/MC/V.

The Old Clam House really is old — it's been in the same location since the Civil War — but the seafood preparations are fresh, in an old-fashioned way. Matchless cioppino. Sports types cluster at the bar, under the shadow of a halved, mounted Jaguar E-type. (P.R., 4/02) 299 Bayshore (at Oakdale), S.F. 826-4880. Seafood, L/D, $$, MC/V.

Taqueria El Potrillo serves one of the best chicken burritos in town, if not the best. You can get your bird grilled or barbecued, or have steak instead, or tacos. Excellent salsas and aguas frescas, and warmer weather than practically anywhere else in town. (P.R., 2/02) 300A Bayshore Blvd. (at Flower), S.F. 642-1612. Mexican, B/L/D, $, cash only.

Berkeley, Emeryville, and north

Cafe Rouge All the red meat here comes from highly regarded Niman Ranch, and all charcuterie are made in-house. (S.R., 11/96) 1782 Fourth St. (at Hearst), Berk. (510) 525-1440. American, L/D, $$, AE/MC/V.

César You'll be tempted to nibble for hours from Chez Panisse-related César's Spanish-inspired tapas — unless you can't get past the addictive sage-and-rosemary-flecked fried potatoes. (D.R., 8/98) 1515 Shattuck (near Vine), Berk. (510) 883-0222. Spanish, D, $, DISC/MC/V.

Chez Panisse may be, at 32, an old-timer, but a devotion to the best seasonal ingredients (often organic) grilled on the wood-fired open hearth means the restaurant's distinctive Franco-Cal-Ital signature remains unmistakable, and unmatched. (P.R., 2/03) 1517 Shattuck (at Cedar), Berk. Café, (510) 548-5049, L/D, $$; restaurant, (510) 548-5525, $$$; California, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Lalime's is a long-standing institution in East Bay haute cuisine culture, but there's nothing institutional about the attentive service or the creative and gorgeous dishes. (D.R., 4/00) 1329 Gilman (at Peralta), Berk. (510) 527-9838. French/Mediterranean, D, $$, AE/DC/MC/V.

Rivoli is a near perfect balance of the neighborhood eatery and the eclectic California cuisine destination restaurant. (Staff) 1539 Solano (between Neilson and Peralta), Berk. (510) 526-2542. California, D, $, AE/DC/MC/V.

VIK's Chaat Corner For less than the price of a scone and a latte, you can try lentil dumplings, curries, or a variety of flat or puffed crisp puris with various vegetarian fillings. (D.R., 12/96) 726 Allston Way, Berk. (510) 644-4412. Indian, L/D, $, AE/DC/DS/MC/V.

Zachary's Chicago Pizza The stuffed pizza is simply out of this world. The fact that both Zachary's outlets are always busy speaks for itself. (Staff) 1855 Solano (at Fresno), Berk. (510) 525-5950; 5801 College (at Oak Grove), Berk. (510) 655-6385. Pizza, L/D, $, AE/MC/V.

Oakland and Alameda

Le Cheval Shrimp rolls and peanut sauce, the fried Dungeness crab, the marinated "orange flavor" beef, the buttery lemon-grass prawns — it's all fabulous. (Staff) 1007 Clay (at 10th St.), Oakl. (510) 763-8495. Vietnamese, L/D, $, MC/V.

Giglio isn't fancy, but its pastas and salads are solid, and the occasional veal dish shines. Comfy trattoria feel. (P.R., 6/02) 5427 College (at Kales), Oakl. (510) 594-0798. Italian, L/D, $, AE/MC/V. Not wheelchair accessible.

Nan Yang offers too many great dishes — ginger salad, spicy fried potato cakes, coconut chicken noodle soup, garlic noodles, succulent lamb curry that melts in your mouth — to experience in one visit. (Staff) 6048 College (at Claremont), Oakl. (510) 655-3298. Burmese, L/D, $, MC/V. ❖

8 women

I know what you heard this summer.

By Johnny Ray Huston

The scene of the crime: a wintry mansion in rural France, where cute lil' deer sniff at snowdrifts before frolicking off into the woods. No, wait — that was a movie. This is a copycat case we're dealing with, and though not that many people have seen François Ozon's 8 Women, it's an important piece of evidence. Once again, there are eight female suspects who can't resist bursting into song. But this time the victim was found on the city streets, clutching an outdated boom box tuned to the radio. Much like the victim, the boom box's batteries were near-dead. Anonymous callers have reported hearing certain sounds — "Awww baby," "Uh oh," and "Ooh!" among them — in the vicinity around the time of the fatal skirmish. Below are the main suspects.

Lumidee Frequently spotted sitting on a stoop in humid Spanish Harlem, peeking out from behind the shoulders of rhyme recycler Fabulous and a photo op-crazed Busta Rhymes, this almost-famous young offender and potential one-hit wonder has hijacked the airwaves thanks to the summer's trendiest pop production trick — Steven "Lenky" Marsden's diwali riddim, which first crossed over in Wayne Wonder's sweet and superior "No Letting Go." But sophisticatedly syncopated hand claps aren't Lumidee's chief identifiable feature. Her modus operandi, one that's become increasingly prevalent this summer, is a vocal attack that remains off-key from start to finish. Witnesses usually report an uncontrollable urge to sing (or at least think) "Uh oh" on hearing her signature tune.

Ashanti Affiliated with an organization called Murder Inc., this suspect is usually seen oiled up from head to toe. She used to keep company with a singer-rapper who some say sounds like the Cookie Monster. Currently she runs with a pack led by the creatively monikered Chink Santana and the legally challenged Irv Gotti. Her dubious activities include a tendency to shamelessly imitate (but never duplicate) the boat-rocking beachside sensuality of just-departed Aaliyah. She's also frequently been accused of stealing wholesale from another suspect on this list (see: Mary J. Blige). Author of a book of poetry titled Foolish/Unfoolish, Ashanti is also a songwriter — a Carole King-style hit maker, in fact — and a singer/nonsinger, according to refund-policy plaintiffs.

Lil' Mo The first of two Lil' divas on this shortlist, Mo has raised a ruckus with alleged irreverent comments about the vocal talents of Christina Aguilera, as well as confirmed hilarious remarks about unnamed industry "puppets" controlled by someone who sticks a hand up their nether regions and commands, "Sing, puppet, sing!" She's not afraid of answering 50 Cent's "21 Questions," and at BET's Spring Bling

Monica Monica has been through plenty since the video for "The Boy Is Mine," in which she (to quote writer Allison Stewart) "resembled a particularly beautiful praying mantis eyeing poor, moon-faced Brandy as if she were an appetizer." She's witnessed the suicide of a former boyfriend and the incarceration of a more recent one, so her life isn't slick pop fodder. But slick pop is what she's decided to serve up on her third album, After the Storm, "U Should Have Known Better" 's visiting-hour scenario aside. Monica's mystery-lady persona may invoke suspicion, but in this shameless era she can't be blamed for maintaining a cool distance. The video for "So Gone" reaffirms that she has no rival where albums have been hawked on MTV and VH1's satellite-station versions of the Home Shopping Network.

Lil' Kim Some might claim this potential defendant shouldn't be on the list, but attempts at R. Kelly-style singing on La Bella Mafia's "This Is a Warning" qualify her: undeniable evidence that she doesn't need a pointy steel object to draw blood from people's ears, they're either symptoms of delusion or a bad sense of humor. The lack of a proper mic check for her BET Awards performance provides her with one criminal motive. 50 Cent's decision not to lend a "Magic Stick" at that show, though he's since performed with Blige at this year's MTV Video Music Awards (on a song he didn't even record with Blige), provides another. Has Kim heard Blige's new song about former friends? No answer yet, but XXL readers know one thing: at the moment, Foxy Brown's interviews are better than Kim's rhymes.

Beyoncé The Chi-Lites charge of Beyoncé's "Crazy in Love" chorus still qualifies as one of this season's highlights. However, her album's front and back cover pics capture her in the act of a common misdemeanor: Aaliyah imitation. Her other standout track, "Me, Myself and I" (aren't those the members of Destiny's Child?), cancels out the dreadful diwali duet with inescapable Sean Paul, if not the "Butterfly Kisses"-like love song to her manager daddy. Regardless, Jay-Z's Bonnie can keep counting the money. Is she "Crazy in Love," "Dangerously in Love," or both?

Mary J. Blige The something-about-Mary in 2003 is whether she's returned to save hip-hop soul or bury it. For many listeners, "Love at 1st Sight" wasn't love at first sound, but — initially, at least — an inferior "4Ever" that makes Lumidee sound pitch-perfect. Thankfully, her Love and Life album just might nurse the victim back to the terms in its title. It's not quite the cohesive flip side to My Life's masterpiece of misery, but its best tracks still possess gut-bucket soulfulness ("Ooh!"). Wedding snake-rattles to earthquake beats, her duet with 50 Cent exposes all other rap-and-R&B collabs as flyweight efforts, and elsewhere ("Friends," "Feel Like Makin Love") she rivals Patti and Aretha in their roof-raising primes. The making-of-album DVD doesn't scrimp on interesting Puff-vs.-Mary studio arguments that reveal the strengths and weaknesses of both parties, and practically the only white person whose face isn't digitally scrambled is Liza Minnelli.

The final verdict: no one is innocent, and perhaps Mya and Lil' Kim should be sentenced to potty-mouthed roles in the sequel to Freddy vs. Jason. But thanks to Lil' Mo and Blige, summer pop's hip-hop soul is still alive, and thus able to hold on for another few weeks, until Erykah Badu arrives with a nuclear shroom-size 'fro. Uh oh. ❖ concert, surrounded by models wearing bikinis made out of wigs, she demonstrated a currently unfashionable ability to maintain perfect pitch. Her underrated second album asserts that Mo is a girl next door, but an interlude ("Disturbing Phone Call") proves she's a serious threat when a cheating man looks at her with "that stupid face." The summer's strongest single makes it clear she wants her love to last "4Ever" — even if the rapper who plays her groom seems more concerned with his dick size than her diamond ring.

throwing shade at the camera (or throwing expensive objets d'art at windows) is concerned, and the song itself — thanks to a crushed-velvet alto lead vocal, a Whispers sample, and sinuous Missy-Tweet harmonies — is "4Ever" 's closest summer-pop rival.

Two lights

On the first day of August the U.S. Border Patrol arrested a Mexican family — parents, son, daughter, and nephew — in downtown San Diego, a block from the Mexican consulate, the very place supposed to guarantee their security. They were on their way to apply for the matricula consular identification cards the Mexican government routinely issues to Mexican nationals living in the United States. When a friend of the family went to pick up their car later that same day, he too was arrested, then deported.

Though the arrests have spawned internal criticism of Border Patrol policy, the implications for immigrant rights and California's future — increased deportations and detentions, and increased enforcement of homeland security ideology — have been buried by the recall farce. And yet they have everything to do with it; they're part and parcel of an engineered swing to the right, where Republican money buys state regime change — only this time Pete Wilson is played by Arnold Schwarzenegger.

Unlike undocumented Mexicans, Schwarzenegger is the right's favorite kind of immigrant: a white European with a funny accent and lots of money who supports Proposition 187.

Nobody in Hollywood wants to make movies about the California that deported that family, so until they do I'm happy to think vicariously through the British, as I did when I saw Stephen Frears's new film about immigrant London, Dirty Pretty Things. "We are the people you don't see," says Okwe, the film's lead character. "We drive your cabs, clean your hotel rooms, and suck your cocks." Okwe is a Nigerian refugee who drives cabs and works behind a hotel front desk. His few hours of sleep are spent on a couch in a tiny apartment he illegally shares with Senay, a Turkish hotel maid.

Okwe and Senay are surrounded by people who, though they may come from Croatia, China, or Spain, are now just like them, low-wage immigrants trying to earn a living while not being deported or arrested. Since the early '90s London's immigration rate has skyrocketed to a level higher than that of New York City or Los Angeles. While the '70s brought mostly South Asians, the London of the post-cold war era is the one that Frears gives us, the London of Africans, Poles, Arabs, Kosovans, and Iraqis.

Unlike California politicians, Frears is so committed to dealing with the "invisibles" of globalization (most of the film takes place in kitchens, hotel rooms, alleys, and basements) that he doesn't just make white Londoners disappear, he also barely lets them talk. The dialogue and plot belong predominantly to the under-world of London's immigrant underclass, and as a result, the film is riddled with constant tension. The characters are always looking over their shoulders, always at risk of being violated, victimized, or put under the knife to trade kidneys for passports. And there is no happy ending of successful settlement and citizenship. Okwe and Senay came to London to escape Nigeria and Turkey. At the film's end, they escape London.

If Dirty Pretty Things is the first major film of post-cold war immigrant London, then The Hour of Two Lights is its first major soundtrack. The brainchild of Terry Hall (a British-born Jew of Polish descent) and Mushtaq (a British-born Muslim with a Bangladeshi father and an Iranian mother), the album begins with the voice of Natasha, a 12-year-old Lebanese girl, and ends with Hall singing, "In the name of freedom, we speak and spell."

Hall and Mushtaq assemble an extraordinary migrant supergroup that almost seems overly handpicked to suit current politics. There's an Algerian rapper and a Jewish clarinetist, a Turkish singer and Romany Red — a group of Polish gypsies who fled Poland for London's East End after having their homes firebombed. There are Iranian flutes and Indian oboes, turntable scratches, and guest spots from Blur's Damon Albarn (his label, Honest Jones, is releasing the album). On "A Gathering Storm," Eva Katzler sings in Hebrew over Arab percussion while Hall intones, "Someone's cooking up enough hate to fill the sky."

The music on The Hour feels like such a radical break precisely because of Hall's and Mushtaq's histories in the British music scene. In the '80s Hall was a key member of the Specials, the pioneering multiracial ska band who ran from the National Front on "Concrete Jungle." Mushtaq was a member of Fun-Da-Mental, the Anglo-Asian protest crew better known for their antiracist politics than for the industrialized hip-hop behind it. But this album makes both bands seem dated, products of England's immigrant past, not its future.

In an article on The Hour that ran in England's Guardian earlier this month, Mushtaq explained that he took the album's title from the Iranian legend that twilight is the most dangerous time for children to be outside playing, "the end of day and the beginning of night, not quite settled." Being "not quite settled" might be the quintessential social danger of economic globalization, leaving a world full of invisible people forced to live without security between homes that won't have them. ❖

film

XX eye

Student Nurses aid the MadCat fest's strong lineup. By Cheryl Eddy

With its suggestive title and the distinction of being the first film released under Roger Corman's New World Pictures banner, The Student Nurses, a 1970 ode to sexually liberated women in white (and little starched hats) reeks of a soft-core variation on "playing doctor." But if it is, what the heck's it doing in this year's MadCat Women's International Film Festival?

As it turns out, MadCat — which kicks off Sept. 9 and runs through Oct. 5 at various Bay Area venues — hasn't converted to an all-porn format. Nurses, the only feature-length narrative in the fest, is quite shrewdly (and appropriately) programmed. Like all the MadCat selections, Nurses was directed by a woman: Stephanie Rothman, a University of Southern California grad who broke into the biz by working for Corman at American International Pictures and New World (her first film was 1966's inauspiciously titled It's a Bikini World). Plenty of now-recognizable names emerged from the Corman school, but almost all, including Jonathan Demme, John Sayles, Joe Dante, Jack Hill, and Monte Hellman, were men. Rothman's female perspective, along with her technical skills, enabled her to raise Nurses a notch above standard drive-in fare.

Of course, this ain't art-house stuff; many standard exploitation elements (spotty acting, gratuitous boobs, clumsily post-dubbed dialogue) are firmly in place. There are also plenty of ridiculously bygone moments ("There's gonna be a love-in this weekend — you wanna go?") that, viewed today, play as pure comedy. But some dated plot points, in particular one girl's struggle to be "approved" for a legal abortion, are eye-opening. Overall, the film is surprisingly pro-female, with relatively well-developed characters.

Nurses revolves around the lives and loves of four Los Angeles roommates in their final months of nursing school: Sharon (Elaine Giftos), who forms a close bond with a terminally ill patient; Priscilla (Barbara Leigh), a free spirit who befriends an LSD-pushing hippie biker; Phred (Karen Carlson), who would be easy to stereotype as a blond bimbo if she didn't spout off lines like "What I do with my body is my business!"; and Lynn (Brioni Farrell), who lends her medical skills to a group of Mexican American revolutionaries frequently injured in skirmishes with "the pigs."

Nurses might be lowballed by B-movie connoisseurs for being too much like a soap opera and not enough like the many, many nurse-themed sexploitation films that followed in its wake (Private Duty Nurses, Candy Stripe Nurses, Night Call Nurses, etc.). But its inclusion in the MadCat fest is an inspired move by curator Ariella Ben-Dov — the film will reach an entirely new audience of feminist filmgoers who might never have given it a second look otherwise. And it's plenty entertaining to boot.

The bulk of the festival is composed of programs of thematically grouped short films — mostly documentaries and experimental works. The collection of obsessions in program one, "Gotta Get It," plays the festival's opening night at El Rio. Gems in this batch include Jennifer Drummond's wry "The F.E.D.S.," a colorful, startlingly lifelike animated doc about "Food Education Demo Specialists" who provide samples to hungry customers in an Austin, Texas, supermarket; and "Bingo Ladies," Tami Wilson's 16mm study of the agony and ecstasy of elderly women devoted to Canada's largest charitable gambling enterprise.

Fans of innovative animation should seek out program eight, "Cut Snip Ooze: Contemporary Animated Films by Women," which contains Celia Galan Julve's must-see "Historia del desierto." This wickedly funny miniepic creates more atmosphere and intrigue in 6 minutes than most Hollywood films can manage in 90; it's the stop-motion tale of a fearsome Mexican fugitive nicknamed "La Mocha," whose thumbless existence leads her to crime, a prison break, masked wrestling, and eventually, the pursuit of pure evil. Program eight also features Nancy Andrews's 38-minute "Monkeys and Lumps," a weirdly involving experimental piece that uses puppets, drawings, and live action to link "chalk talk," Jane Goodall and her chimps, sled-dog attacks, and a string of mysteries involving giant lumps of decaying, hairy tissue that wash up on Tasmanian beaches, among other topics.

This year MadCat also gets historical with several programs highlighting women filmmakers from years past. Program seven, "Clear Visions: Silent Filmmakers I," screens works by Alice Guy-Blaché and Maya Deren, with live music by the Secrets of Family Happiness, San Andreas, and others. Program 11, "Clear Visions: Silent Filmmakers II," features live accompaniment by Epic [Abridged] and includes films from 1924 and before by early trailblazers Cleo Madison, Nell Shipman, and Lois Weber. And for devotees of bizarre old educational films, there's program 10, "Educated Ladies: Films from the PFA Collection," never-before-seen snippets, mostly from the 1950s, from the Pacific Film Archive vaults. The collection includes mountain-dwelling Arkansas folk singers, a UC Berkeley-made phys-ed film on springboard diving, the intriguingly titled "Making Theatrical Wigs," and sex-ed films about puberty and reproduction — just in case The Student Nurses whets your appetite for further medical study. ❖

MadCat Women's International Film Festival runs Sept. 9–Oct. 2. Venues include El Rio, 3158 Mission, S.F.; Artists' Television Access, 992 Valencia, S.F.; PFA Theater, 2575 Bancroft, Berk.; and Yerba Buena Center for the Arts, 701 Mission, S.F. For tickets (most shows $7–$20) and information, call (415) 436-9523 or go to www.madcatfilmfestival.org.

Dumbed down

The Graduate, stripped of its seditious intelligence and humor, trips and falls onstage. By Rob Avila

If Terry Johnson's stage adaptation of The Graduate is trying to seduce me, it's doing a disappointing job of it. The fumbling production rubs me the wrong way. My belly felt like an alligator's at its touch, alternately lulled to sleep and provoked to snap.

Naturally, I didn't expect the play to be exactly like, or even as good as, the film, and probably no one else does, either. The show's handlers promote it as a star vehicle, implying that the originals (novel and film) have been refashioned (awkwardly and halfheartedly, it turns out) to gain a greater vantage of the character of Mrs. Robinson — played here by a certified star, Jerry Hall, certainly one of the firmer sets of legs onstage.

But the disappointment reaches beyond the tedium of a production that tries to be breezy but only manages to be slight; one where the Beach Boys' "Wouldn't It Be Nice" predominates over Simon and Garfunkel's "Sounds of Silence." One despairs at seeing a work of subversive art twisted into its opposite by a shallow impostor.

Bowdlerized Broadway-wise, Charles Webb's 1962 bestseller and, more memorably, Mike Nichols's brilliant film receive the dubious compliment of being converted into a cloying bit of accessible theater. A satire that worked by engaging our intelligence ends up as a parody that tries to bludgeon it. The stage antics wink at us with laugh lines and iconic scenes we all know by heart, while turning their meaning 180 degrees around and assuming we won't know the difference.

Through no fault of Ms. Hall and her suitably sultry, predatory Mrs. Robinson, it's as if the sex and seduction in the story line had been thought up by the ad department, since the play produces no real sense of them, playing largely for laughs the scenes that in the film were also fraught with a sweaty, even spooky tension that only heightened their marvelous humor.

By shifting the center of the story in the direction of Mrs. Robinson, the safety of family melodrama is effectively substituted for a darkly comic satire of all institutional authority from the family on up.

Johnson has added several scenes (stewarded in this touring production by director Peter Lawrence) whose function may be to give us more characterization, but which take a dull hatchet to the essential boundary between the world of the parents — representatives of a catatonic, morally bankrupt society, infecting young and old alike — and Ben Braddock's sublime alienation. For instance, we get a drunken heart-to-heart between Mrs. Robinson and daughter Elaine (Devon Sorvari), and a sober one between Ben (Rider Strong) and his father (likable William Hill), each meant to build sympathy for the traditional, if dysfunctional, nuclear unit. There's even a silly and anachronistic scene in which Ben and his desperate parents sprawl uncomfortably on beanbag purposeful breeding of pliant mediocrity). Instead, our heroes derive supreme pleasure from retreating into bed like playful siblings with a box of Froot Loops.

Forced to grow up too fast, Ben and Elaine reclaim their childhood. But far from being an indictment of society, their dilemma never seems to stretch much beyond the front lawn. When Ben calls his parents and their entire social world "grotesque," he merely sounds typically adolescent, immature and rather unsympathetic. It's significant that a recent Harper's Index recorded the average age most Americans now give for the start of adulthood as 26. By this reckoning Ben and Elaine are indeed entitled to several more years of childhood. And one expects they will soon reconcile and conform to their parents' world.

Johnson substitutes today's overgrown adolescents, in the form of a gratingly bland couple, for the baby boomers Nichols left at the back of the bus — who not only left the nest but also chopped down the tree. The final scene in the film worked in part because of the ambiguity it allowed. Who knew what would happen to them now that they had turned instinctually and irrevocably on the only world they had ever known? But that suspended moment, as they sit mutely side by side staring ahead, invites back the music that had opened the film, "Sound of Silence," a song whose esoteric, prophetic imagery already suggests chairs before a long-haired, barefooted psychiatrist (John Leonard Thompson) in a half lotus.

Johnson, with supreme confidence, actually ventures to tack on his own ending, giving in to a doubly regrettable urge to imagine what happens after Ben and Elaine get off the bus and to make sure that whatever it is conforms to a formulaic happy ending. Moreover, in imagining Ben and Elaine wallowing in the faux innocence of their childhood in a chaste hotel bed, the scene betrays a contemporary conceit, though not one loyal to the spirit of the original (with its rejection of a deadening social order and the platitudes that mask its an awakening consciousness that makes return impossible.

Interestingly, in the stage version we only ever hear the opening guitar riff to the song, never the words. They're quashed along with the existential angst and social bite of the film. The play closes instead on the romantic and upbeat opening stanza of Simon and Garfunkel's "America." America indeed. Unable to register silence, we're left merely dumbfounded. ❖

Local hero

Too Short worked hard, dreamed big, and never stopped rapping — it paid off for him and put Oakland on the rap world's map. By J.H. Tompkins

I remember back when it all began / I used to sign dirty rhymes to my east-side fans / Back then I knew you couldn't stop that rap / No M.C. could rap like that." So begins Life Is ... Too Short, the title cut to the 1988 platinum album that takes you straight into a chapter of the world according to Too Short. The language is simple, and the stories move straight to the point, in a way that's fitting for someone from no-frills East Oakland, where in 1981, 14-year-old Todd Shaw — later to be known as Too Short — started to rap.

Just four lines into the song — one of his best — he's already aired the themes that provide the bedrock of his work: nostalgia for mythical days gone by; nasty, horny women and the pimps who use them; triumph over enemies who would silence him; and most important, the improbable, true story of a kid from East Oakland with a taste for laid-back funky beats and tight, simple rhymes who in the mid 1980s became the West Coast's first genuine rap star. Too Short — as he announces again and again — started young, worked hard, and played his first gigs for captive audiences on AC Transit, in Oakland city parks, and on Telegraph Avenue in Berkeley. Within a few years, he became the West Coast's first national rap star. Suddenly, battered, tough Oakland became "Oaktown," a rap mecca. When Too Short said, "East Oakland, yeah, that's right," in "I Ain't Trippin'," people from Oakland said it right along with him. It felt good just rolling off the tongue.

As a teenager, he was smart, ambitious, and focused — "But when a dream is all you got homeboy / you gotta turn that dream into the real McCoy" ("Life Is ...") — but he was forced to ask the same questions as his fans: "Do you wanna rap or sell coke / Brothers like you ain't never broke," he asked, and answered with this: "Eight years on the mike and I ain't jokin' / Sir Too Short comin' straight from Oakland / California, home of the rock / Eight woofers in the trunk, beatin' down your block."

Twenty years after young men and women chanted, "I am [clap, clap] somebody" and fought to free Huey P. Newton, their sons and daughters jammed enormous speakers into the trunks of big, old gas guzzlers to deliver their own generationally adjusted version. People got it, too, like it or not — when a subsonic boom rolled down the street, rattled the windows, drowned out the TV, and thumped you in the gut, that was Too Short calling from East Oakland. He was telling stories a lot of people hadn't heard before.

Big things

That was 15 years ago; today Too Short is a wealthy Atlanta resident who has already retired once and is no longer driven by the same fires he once was. But for who don't remember "when it all began," there is the film (also available on DVD) Life Is ... The Life and Times of Todd Shaw, by director Rene Macada-McElroy (wife of producer and onetime member of Timex Social Club, Thomas McElroy) and executive producer, and Tony Toni Toné cofounder, D'Wayne Wiggins. The down and dirty film mixes on-camera comments by Too Short, pictures, memorabilia, snapshots, and the observations and memories of former collaborators and a posse of hip-hop artists, activists, and writers. DJ, writer, and community activist David "Davey D" Cook takes a long view of the rapper's career in the film. "He was one of those Oakland people that really have come to personify an entire community," he says. "He's proven that you can come up from the bottom of the barrel and do big things."

When they were still close to the barrel's bottom, Shaw and his friend Freddy B — both known in the neighborhood for their rapping skills — went into business. In a 1989 interview, he told the story to venerable KALX DJ, writer, and label jockey Billy Jam. "I'll tell you where it started," he told Jam. "It was at a guy called Al's house on Sunnyside in deep East Oakland. Freddie B and myself would pass through and hang out. And one day we were just rapping, and Hot Lips was like 'I'm really not interested in what you're doing. I don't want to hear that shit. But if you had my name in the shit, then I'd play it.' And the next day we had a tape with his name in it and $20 bucks in our pocket. So we started making some money doing that."

Too Short cranked out personal requests, peddled his tapes around town, and his reputation spread on the strength of simple, hugely popular dirty raps like "The Invasion of the Flat Booty Bitches," and "Blow Job Betty," which were among the songs he recorded for local label 75 Girls, run by Dean Hodges. "Freaky Tales," from Born to Mack, his third and last with the label, became his signature tune, and Hodges along with producer Ted Bohannon (who supplied the tricked-out ride for Too Short's publicity photos) groomed their protégé for life as a successful young playa. "He was a star in Oakland," Bohannon says with the kind of quiet conviction that demands attention. "I made him look like one everywhere else."

"Todd always had a way of getting other people to do things for him," his mother says to the camera. The support from 75 Girls and Bohannon was helpful, no doubt, but in the long run, the river ran just one way. After sales for Born to Mack stalled at 50,000, Jive Records came calling and Too Short signed. Born to Mack was reissued and became a gold record. Life Is ... Too Short, which came next, went platinum, and as Too Short rapped in "I Ain't Trippin'": "One day I was on the bus/ the next day I was on the gas."

Good times

The '80s were a remarkable era for East Bay musicians like Timex Social Club, En Vogue, Digital Underground, E-40, B-Legit, Mac Mall, and Richie Rich. Tony, Toni, Toné, the band Wiggins formed with his brother and cousin, was another. TTT had a huge R&B hit with "Little Walter," from their debut album, Who. During the next eight years they released four remarkably consistent, big-selling albums that made them national stars as well as local heroes who, like Too

Short, remain close to their hometown roots.

Wiggins smiles when remembering the old days. "I was on 80th and Olive in East Oakland the first time I heard Too Short," he said recently across a table at Jahva House, the artsy café he opened on Lake Shore Boulevard several years ago. "I think I'll always remember that. My younger brother, Desmond was a Too Short fan, and he played it for me. I was an R&B cat, but I liked Kurtis Blow, and I liked Blowfly too. When Too Short came along he was like a young Blowfly, tellin' stories about the town. And you'd see him at Arroyo Park, sellin' his tapes. I went to Castlemont High, and he went to Fremont, but he was over on Sunnyside — if you're from there you immediately know he was part of East Oakland, part of the culture."

Too Short's raps were simple but subtle, displaying the same economy and focus he used to launch his career. His stripped-down beats were built around pared-down, relentlessly propulsive, and incredibly funky drum-bass patterns. And while New York rappers headed toward massive audio collages that used elements of jazz and rock, as well as funk, Too Short's ideas were important to what became the distinct West Coast style.

There's no question that the funk bands of the 1970s — particularly the various incarnations of George Clinton — influenced Too Short. But it's also important to note that in the early '80s, California's urban black population was just some 35 years removed from sharecropping and the rural South. Listen to the laid-back, sparse instrumentation on Oakland blues musician Lowell Fulson's huge 1954 hit "Reconsider Baby" — you can hear it in Too Short's beats. The simplicity that was foreign to sophisticated East Coast ears was particularly important to a rapper who started out penning custom-tailored raps and who became a local star before he had a record out or any radio presence.

The proof

Too Short changed the face of rap — and if the millions of albums he sold won't be evidence enough, if young musicians 30 years from now aren't sampling his work, then the film version of Life Is ... Too Short tells the tale. And if Too Short is all about "Freaky Tales" for you, well, those are "the tales [he] tells so well," as he puts it. But Too Short has more on his mind than the pimps and players of East Oakland; he's an astute observer of the racism and discrimination that's blighted the area. In "Short but Funky," from 1990's Short Dog's in the House, he raps, "There's a serious side in everything I say / Life is too short for you to wait til the next day / Just straighten up your life and you can start right here / Drop the cocaine and the bottles of beer." His reworking of Donnie Hathaway's "The Ghetto" is his finest moment — bittersweet praise to the world he came from, built around lines like these: Even though my sister smoked crack cocaine / She was nine months pregnant, ain't nothing changed / $600 million on a football team / And her baby dies just like a dope fiend / The story I tell is so incomplete / Five kids in the house and no food to eat / Don't look at me and don't ask me why / Mama's next door getting high."

The real stakes lurking behind his freaky tales are on his mind. And though it's a stretch to say he is worried about his legacy, there's no doubt Too Short has been paying attention. "In 100 years," he says to the camera, "[people] might say that the innovator of rap was Eminem. That's how they might write it down. But they're going to have to say there was this one mother-fucker named Too Short. They're not going to write Too Short out of the history of rap. I have my album, Don't Stop Rappin'. I never did." ❖

Short and funky: Too Short's raps about his hometown turned Oakland into Oaktown.

When a dream is all you got homeboy you gotta turn that dream into the real McCoy"

From Life Is ... Too Short, Too Short

No one is innocent

Never mind the graying of punk, here's the Sex Pistols. By Kimberly Chun

Punk's not dead. It's just getting creaky. Punk knew it was getting old when it made the choice between going out and getting some sleep. So now it wobbles off to bed at 11 p.m. in order to get a full night. Punk tells itself it wants to stay in and keep an eye on the kids or walk the dog, and it needs to get up early so it can go to the gym before heading to work. Because punk really needs to go the gym, or it feels like the crap it used to find stuck to the bottom of its Converse.

Don't get me wrong, punk continues to be true to itself — it still loves an underdog, loathes hypocrisy, and of course, hates Bush, both the president and the band. But it's getting tired. When broken beat or hip-hop try to drag it out to a club, it waves its hand dismissively, says it's been there and done that, and it would rather go home, put away a six-pack, settle in with a good book, or fall asleep in front of the TV after Queer Eye for the Straight Guy. Still, punk sometimes wonders where all the years went. In its darker moments, punk considers Botox.

Funny then, when I checked in on my old friend, that I discovered it's more a part of the pop mainstream than ever. Perhaps punk simply found its own comfort level — or maybe a weary, restless culture just caught up to it and its angry ways. The tide has been shifting for years, ever since 1991: The Year Punk Broke (as the title of the documentary goes), and rock-via-grunge grudgingly acknowledged its existence again. Or maybe it's been happening since that last Sex Pistol's money-grab, er, reunion outing, the Filthy Lucre World Tour in 1996, which gave past and present punks that strange yet all too familiar feeling of pride mixed with repulsion. Shortly thereafter came the hordes of old-school punks, playing out like living-museum showcases: Television, the Buzzcocks, the Damned. Some, like Wire and Siouxsie and the Banshees, even put out albums; a few, such as the Fall, never stopped.

Punk's younger turks by affiliation or just style — from Green Day, AFI, and Rancid to Good Charlotte, Blink 182, and even Avril Lavigne — are entrenched in the rock landscape. The trend-sniffing Hilton sisters go out with members of Sum 41; the Dixie Chicks are busy working bondage pants and sometimes even a King's Road-style phallic pompadour. The widely touted savant of Michael Lewis's recent best-seller, Moneyball: The Art of Winning an Unfair Game, Oakland A's manager Billy Beane, announces to the media that he'll be attending the upcoming Sex Pistols show. Even that all-American appliance peddler Sears is hawking togs like studded belts and "Punky Turtle" T-shirts in its back-to-school ads.

The purity of punk

If all that wasn't proof that punk should be getting out and flaunting its triple-bleached roots, there's old-school SoCal punk vocalist Jack Grisham of T.S.O.L. (True Sounds of Liberty), running for governor in a packed field of Pinole). "But I'm serious about this. This is the only chance for a fringe candidate to step into the position of governor. It may seem funny, but it's not going to be funny when registering your car costs 10 times the amount your car costs. Or when health insurance won't pay for your wife's mammogram."

Married with two daughters and running as an independent, Grisham says manual labor jobs and a recent back injury have made him passionate about improving health care and defending the rights of undocumented work-

Still a pistol: John Lydon, a.k.a. Johnny Rotten, looks back — and forward — with anger (and humor).

assorted hopefuls and/or publicity hounds. As recently as two years ago, on "In My Head" off T.S.O.L.'s last album, Disappear (Nitro), Grisham spat lyrics such as, "I'm sick of politicians / Sick of institutions / Sick of everything they stand for ... Sick of their lies / Sick of their crimes," so it's tricky reconciling Grisham's proto-Misfits black-and-white face paint and his goth-thrash tendencies from back in the day with the almost slick presentation of a more buttoned-down Citizen Grisham on his Web site. Picture Glenn Danzig up against Dianne Feinstein, though when I talked to Grisham by phone from his home in Huntington Beach, he delivered a satisfyingly pitbull-like attack on issues that matter to him.

"At first you might think, punk rock guy running for governor — he wants cops to wear clown suits," said the 42-year-old Grisham, a Hayward native who says service runs in his family (his brother is the city manager of ers, all while somehow advocating fiscal responsibility. And though his label is mad at him for not talking about T.S.O.L.'s new CD, he doesn't see any conflict in railing against the government while rallying to join the establishment. "I was raised on bands like the Dead Kennedys and the Dils; I was raised to question government, so I think there's nothing more natural than someone coming out of a punk rock band getting inside," he said. Before getting off the phone, he offered one vivid metaphor, describing voters getting bent over the back of a car and reamed by their government. "I have to stop cussing," he added.

The boy, or rather, candidate, can't help himself. And that may be the key to why punk keeps bobbing up to the surface of today's zeitgeist and why Grisham says the staffers at his local voter's office are already encouraging him to run again, for anything. Maybe we're all looking for authenticity and honest answers after years of disappointment and lies. After the boom, bust, and failed promises of the dot-com years and now in the midst of economic hardship, we're searching for something that's pure, real and isn't diluted by the marketplace or putrified by commerce. The cultural and musical dissonance of punk seems to parallel our own internal conflict.

Sign of the times

Portland, Ore., music writer Richard Meltzer remembers the first wave of punk — and actively looks at the experience of aging in his latest book, Autumn Rhythm. Those meditations on mortality, however, were far from his thoughts when he first started going to punk shows in Los Angeles from 1977 to '80. "It was the best music in L.A. since bebop in the '40s. I had my band [Vom, whose recordings were recently included in a spoken word release with Guided by Voices' Robert Pollard] in '77, and we did some shows. But seeing all these bands do it — it was not really rock 'n' roll, as such. It was something else. Rock had become conspicuously choreographed insincerity: it was pose and nothing but. Punk was not about the same marketplace — it wasn't selling the same product, because there was no market for it. Two hundred people went to every punk show in L.A. — the same 200 people."

Now millions are looking to punk signifiers like studded cuffs and ripped T-shirts — for what? Perhaps it offers an outlet for rage, that feeling of frustration with a government that ignores them. In some sense the dot-com explosion was fed by a similar urge to tear up an old order and give way to a younger workforce that got piercings and tats in the early '90s, colored its consciousness with punk values by way of Nirvana, and yearned to vent its disgust with its parents' rules. That's why there's bands like the Bay Area's One Man Army. They have the barking, buzz-saw urgency of the early Clash down and, when I talked to them last fall in a Richmond District café, they resembled members of the Exploited and Toy Dolls. They don't set out to imitate the Clash, vocalist-guitarist Jack Dalrymple said. "It just kind of comes out that way because that's what I love."

"They were just the coolest," raved bassist Heiko Schrepel from behind wraparound shades. "They looked amazing, and every album was different."

Standing its ground

I can second that emotion. As a teenager trapped in prep school, I already had a working radar for cool, and we all knew who and what was hip. X was just a rumor, passed to me in geometry class like a quickly scribbled note from cool boy Jonesy, known for his skinny pants and high tops. The Ramones were the buzz thanks to repeated airings of Rock 'n' Roll High School on HBO, but otherwise Devo and the B-52s were the only wavos capable of infiltrating the radio airwaves. The Pistols, the Clash, Minor Threat, Black Flag, and dozens of other punks were worlds away, mostly accessible only by hard-to-find imports on my podunk isle. Jonesy's female counterpart, Brooke, did her damndest to imitate Sue Catwoman with her flippy Norma Kamali skirts and spiky hair, but she eventually got expelled for talking back to teachers and trashing the girls bathroom. Still reeling from those years and obsessed by the Clash, I started Hawaii's first all-girl punk band.

And now I'm getting the bright idea that it's time to get that old group back together again! Of course, for users and abusers like Meltzer, it can be downright depressing to watch those reunions and to realize that punk is no different from any other musical genre.

"There are people who are demolished by the process of aging and, yes, a lot of them are musicians I know," he said. "There's this band, the Dictators — I knew these people when they were 19 years old, and now they're 50, and it's not a 100 percent cheery sight to do the same damn thing at 50. At one time they were a parody of youth rock 'n' roll, crazy hellions, the whole rock persona of 1973. But basically they're doing a version of punk nostalgia. Rock was something that was most interesting when it was about process, and it wasn't about maintaining your foothold on a static piece of land. What are you going to do when fissures develop under your feet?"

"Rock 'n' roll has interested me least when it's been about staying the same," he continued, gaining steam. "People in their 40s and 50s doing rock 'n' roll as lifetime pursuits are embarrassments — it's not that you should not be doing this at that age, but it's the equivalent of never aging. The equivalent of liposuction."

I agree, but that doesn't satisfy the need to cozy up to my chum punk. Maybe we need punk because it was always more honest, even as it was getting hoary, gray, and whiny about its failings, fuck-ups, and frenzies. So you turn to the Sex Pistols, who busted up before they could have truly cashed in — perhaps making them the purest of the lot. When the Clash let you down with lousy songs, when the Buzzcocks got too monotonous, when Elvis Costello lost you in the musical chairs of his genre jumping, the Pistols remained untouchable—because they had left the building long ago.

went absolutely "mental." "There are far more worthier people to be spat on than I," he drawled with malodorous Cockney cheer.

We talk about the eagerness of the audiences and the sing-alongs, which amaze him; "punk cliché" fashion, which disgusts him; the distinct lack of appreciation from institutions like the "Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Shame," which appalls him; and the fact that the Pistols had to "really fight" their way through resistance, coping with jail time and even death, which he's still eager to trumpet. "Here you are today, and you have all these young punk bands all record-companied and sponsored, and they're all nice millionaires.... And I don't see no Dignations comin' to granddad!" he said with a chuckle.

Nonetheless Lydon wants to give back — to the Iraqi people specifically — and bring the Sex Pistols to Baghdad. "I don't necessarily want to go, but I think somebody should. The madness that is going on, and the death that is following, is a real, real serious tragedy," he said. "I have no qualms about playing for the troops, but in their own country or maybe after I play for the population, because nobody's entertaining them, and don't you think they need it? They've had a very miserable 20 years, apparently. Well, the Sex Pistols can give them a very miserable 20 minutes. Then they can decide whether they want democracy or not."

So what if a few Midwestern dates have been canceled or rescheduled due to, Lydon said, "promoter fear"? "They're just worried about people going insane or mental or our crowds being misbehaved. I think that's the biggest problem. What they've got to realize is, a Sex Pistols crowd is not like that. We are the real deal. We are the real hardcore, and we don't need to damage plastic Porta-Potties. I take on governments and institutions, not plastic upholstery."

The toilet flushed. There went the seafood salad.

Real deal

So I was pleasantly surprised by a prickly but amiable John Lydon, a.k.a. Johnny Rotten, who is in the middle of the current Sex Pistols tour and talked to me on the phone from Chicago while he chowed down on a seafood salad and suffered through a ragweed explosion. He's still one of the fastest wits in the West and is just as quick to get a Mohawk when you venture that his band might actually be part of the establishment he despises. With little of the reported Filthy Lucre millions coming their way and no label or sponsorship support, the band is on tour for the last time, he said, as a thank you to the fans. They've had to borrow, if not beg, Limp Bizkit's equipment, and they've been royally spat on by "the posh section" at their recent Toronto concert, where Lydon says 9,000 Canadians written in stone with humans who you care about. I wouldn't do anything to hurt them, and likewise. We're not fond of each other, that's not the word. Ha-ha-ha. We're very, very close in a very strange way. Being in band is like a sick marriage. The loyalties come out onstage. The point is to not let each other down, because you got to imagine how perplexing it can be for four old punks to trot out on a stage, where we haven't been able to rehearse, and remember songs from 25 years ago. But when you mean something, it's not too hard to remember — it's like remembering where you live." ♦ year-old Lydon seems to be settling for more sedate pursuits, including working on a film version of his autobiography, Rotten: No Irish, No Blacks, No Dogs: The Authorized Autobiography Johnny Rotten of the Sex Pistols, with Penelope Spheeris — and learning to drive. It seems essential in L.A. where he lives with his first and only wife, Nora, the mother of one of the Slits. Domestic bliss — very punk. Next he'll find himself developing an unseemly fondness for his bandmates, and who knows, they might even record again.

"We're such an odd quid lot, we just might," he said. "Things cannot be

'Trout Mask' replicas?

Lick my decals off, baby, and dig into a Captain Beefheart revival, thanks to a recent tribute album and a Magic Band reunion release. By Will York

There's a lot of romance surrounding the creative act, but the boring truth is that coming up with great art is usually a lot of work. Divine inspiration and wild spontaneity are more in line with the rock 'n' roll ethos than mundane things like craft and discipline are, though, and to that end, the rock press has always had a soft spot for characters who seem to get their ideas from another plane of existence — whether they're mentally ill (Daniel Johnston, Roky Erickson), they take tons of drugs (too many to list), or they're just plain weird.

Don Van Vliet, a.k.a. Captain Beefheart, is one of these mythical characters, and the story behind his 1969 album, Trout Mask Replica, is one of rock's grand legends. Beefheart supposedly wrote the entire double LP by himself in an eight-hour stretch at the piano and subsequently taught it to the Magic Band, a group of untrained musicians who somehow latched onto and perfected a bunch of songs that continue to baffle most musicians today.

"I felt completely betrayed," Magic Band drummer John French told me in a recent phone interview, talking about the first time he noticed Beefheart propagating that version of history in a 1969 issue of Rolling Stone. French, according to less sensationalized accounts, is the band member most responsible for transcribing and editing the raw ideas Beefheart would sing or plunk out at the piano. Along with other members of the band, French was also in charge of hammering those ideas into actual song form.

The group spent about eight months rehearsing, living in a house with Beefheart in what French now calmly describes as a "cult situation," and then went into the studio and laid down the instrumental tracks for the album in an unbelievable four hours. Beefheart, who still didn't have the songs down at this point, overdubbed his parts later. (You can read more about this whole process in the liner notes to the Grow Fins, Vol. 2: Trout Mask House Sessions box set released by Xeric a few years ago.)

Fresh Meate

Considering what the original Magic Band went through in bringing this music to life, it's disconcerting to hear the careless, laissez-faire contributions of so many of the artists on the recently released Neon Meate Dream of a Octafish: A Tribute to Captain Beefheart and His Magic Band (Animal World). There are 20 songs, and a good fourth of them are variations on the "crazy bluesman and/or poet howling over the din" theme — as if that's all there is to this music. It's no huge surprise to hear that kind of thing from Thurston Moore, whose side-side-side project Dapper phones in an awful seven-minute version of "Beatle Bones 'n Smokin' Stones." (When will folks wise up and quit inviting Sonic Youth members to appear on their tribute albums?) But there are other groups with a little more (or less?) to prove, like 25 Suaves, who should know better, especially after years of having their own music derided as "just a bunch of noise."

The best moments, with one exception, come when the artists actually tackle the music rather than trying to impress us with their crummy avant-garde concepts. Trumans Water, the Minutemen's Mike Watt, and the Flying Luttenbachers' Weasel Walter all provide respectable versions of difficult songs ("Hair Pie: Bake 2," "Dirty Blue Gene," and "Flash Gordon's Ape," respectively). Racebannon turn "Electricity" into a hardcore-noise meltdown, and Azalia Snail does a nice, mellow — and, in a pleasant change of pace, feminine — take on "Abba Zappa." The only radical remake that comes off is the a cappella throat-singing version of "Wild Life" by Arrington de Dionysio of Old Time Relijun, which kind of makes sense because that band name is from a Beefheart song.

Back to the band

Far more consistent is the recent, French-led Magic Band reunion release, Back to the Front (ATP), which is way better than you'd ever expect, coming from a bunch of 40- and 50-plus rockers. And it's not even a true reunion because the lineup — French, Trout Mask-period bassist Mark Boston, and later-era guitarists Denny Walley and Gary Lucas — hadn't played together before.

The big surprise is the vocals, done by French in a dead-on Beefheart impersonation that must be heard to be believed. The reaction I've gotten when I've played it for my friends has been either "Wow, that's amazing — it sounds exactly like Beefheart" or "What's the point? It sounds exactly like Beefheart."

True, they don't pull any radical reinterpretations, but at this stage, my feeling is that if it sounds good, feels good, and is fun to listen to, then there doesn't need to be any more of a point than that. Besides, Trout Mask hasn't endured because of novelty. Novelty fades. It's endured because it has great songs, which sprang from one man's extraordinary imagination but were realized by a band of dedicated, patient, and very committed musicians.

Sure, it would be great to have a reissue of Lick My Decals Off, Baby or an official release of the original Bat Chain Puller album, which is still tied up in post-legal-case limbo in the Zappa family's vaults. But until then, Back to the Front is pretty good, too. Let's hope the new Magic Band's live show, which is scheduled to happen Nov. 8 through 9 at All Tomorrow's Parties in Long Beach, makes it up here sometime soon. ❖

One Ayro: Jeremy Ellis burns brightly in the Detroit electronic scene and is rocking it live this week in San Francisco at Milk.

Ayro-maniac

Jeremy Ellis sets Detroit, and the world, on fire.

By Peter Nicholson

I first got hip to Ayro on Off Limits 3, a CD from Germany's Sonar Kollektiv label that was compiled by DJ Dixon — certainly not the first time an American journalist has “discovered” Detroit talent thanks to a European DJ. Past the Jazzanova and Ursula Rucker tracks lay “Let This,” Jeremy Ellis’s first song recorded as Ayro.

Patiently taking its time, “Let This” builds from uplifting, gospel-flavored vocals into a drawn-out bridge of swirling techno-tinged keys and drum-machine claps before it hits a massive funk breakdown that rivals Parliament at its prime. In the space of six minutes, Ellis manages to channel the rich musical history of Detroit and forge his own sound, one that is at once full of the future and timeless. The song stopped me dead in my tracks and sent me in search of more from Mr. Ellis.

It’s been a twisted trail. It was easy enough to find “Let This” again — the track ended up being licensed to half a dozen compilations, including one from Gilles Peterson. But after getting my fill of Ayro’s completely mental remix of Jazzanova’s “Days to Come” (Compost) and a stellar collaboration with his then-roommate John Arnold for Arnold’s “We’re Not” Ubiquity single, getting my Ayro fix became difficult, even though his work has been a fixture on the playlists of forward-thinking DJs ranging from Budapest’s Crate Soul Brothers to Toronto’s MilkAudio. “Think Twice,” a standout track from this spring’s

Detroit Experiment album (Ropeadope), featured a snatch of his solid Fender Rhodes work, and I managed to weasel the Ayro album sampler from his label, Omoamusic, which confirmed that “Let This” wasn’t just a lucky fluke that happened to catch the fancy of DJs around the globe.

The sampler’s five tracks run from the banging funk of “Drink” to the rolling soul of “Burning Brightly,” always keeping Ellis’s tenor croon front and center, where it’s easy to sink into his love-story lyrics. Despite the intricate, broken beats, Ellis’s firm grasp of melody and structure keeps the music song based, rather than simply dance-floor oriented.

But as it turns out, his full-length, Electroniclovefunk, due out this month, was not to be had, even though it had apparently been finished for a minute. The always present specter of “distribution problems” had raised its ugly head, and Omoa was holding tight to what it knew was the real deal.

“It’s their first [full-length] release on the label, so they’re really taking their time and doing it right,” Ellis says somewhat diplomatically over the phone from Detroit. He originally got involved with Omoa through Matt Chicoine, a.k.a. Recloose (Planet E, !K7), who he had in turn met through Arnold, who recruited Ellis for his own band, Jazzhead.

Instrumental in Detroit

To call the Detroit scene incestuous might be an overstatement, but there definitely is plenty of cross-fertilization going on.

Ellis is used to musical cohabitation and collaboration. Always surrounded by musicians, he started piano lessons at age five and continued classical lessons through high school while performing in musicals and choirs directed by his father. “Jazzhead was how I started to meet all the DJs, and since I was a keyboard player, they asked me to play on their tracks.” The DJs Ellis casually refers to are iconic figures like Alton Miller, Mike “Agent X” Clark, and Carl Craig — icons of the area’s scene.

In a genre dominated by DJs, Ellis stands out as a remarkably talented multi-instrumentalist. At Milk this week he won’t be doing the usual producer appearance consisting of a DJ set highlighting his own records — he’ll be rocking it live. “I’m going to bring an MPC 2000 XL [sampler-drum machine] and a Waldorf Micro Q keyboard ... and I just freestyle,” he says. Ellis’s version of freestyling includes rocking each machine in succession to build the basic tracks and then to improvise over the top, before mixing the rhythms and moving on to the next song. Plus he adds his trademark soulful vocals — live, of course — to some tracks on the fly. Sounds like a recipe for manic disaster, but Ellis’s sets at the Detroit Electronic Music Festival and this year’s Movement have helped build a strong reputation for his live shows.

Confidence man

Ellis’s steady rise through the ranks and his frequent collaborations with innovative musicians who not only define the Detroit sound but also electronic music in general have given him a supremely confident air, yet he is anything but jaded. In fact, he positively bubbles with enthusiasm when describing his plans for a side project to accompany his next album, which will focus on collaborations with Detroit musicians.

“The story is going to be how we can clean up Detroit, which is the world’s most dirty city,” he says. “I’m gonna involve all these people, and we’re going to actually dig in the dirt ... in abandoned lots [by] where I live, and for every song I want to create a different plot of plants. So it’s a real, physical collaboration between the artists and the city.”

When I ask Ellis if his cohorts will be down for gardening or think he’s completely lost the plot, he admits there may be a bit of both reactions. “But in a way it’s me calling everyone out, because everybody sits around and talks about ‘Yeah, we’re going to make it better!’ but then it’s like, glub-glub-glub,” Ellis says, doing an uncanny imitation of a bong hit. “My main motivation right now is the intertwining of politics and environment and the cleanup of the wasteland that we have to live in.”

As usual, Ellis is aiming high. ❖

Ayro performs with DJs Hakobo, Disko, and Tokyo Component Fri/5, 9 p.m., Milk, 1840 Haight, S.F. $10. (415) 387-6455.

Inertia

Rachel asked me to go on tour with her. We don't even know each other that well, but I must have that look that says I will be handy tuning acoustic guitars in the unbearable heat and humidity of a mosquito-soup house show in Middle America.

I had to pass. "I have stuff to do," I said. What stuff? Sitting on my bed a few weeks later trying to avoid cleaning up the mess that's built up around me, I regret not going. I'm itching to travel, but my lottery tickets have not been cooperating. Good shows happened last month: Soddamn Inssein, Friends Forever, Viki and Mammal, all of which made me happy. It was on the off nights that I felt like I was just going out to leave my house, to have somewhere to go.

I met Rachel Jacobs on the day I left New York for good. She didn't see me at my best, but we got in touch again, and I offered to let her crash at my house. Rachel was in the middle of a national tour. She'd done the United States once already and was just finishing college — way ahead of me on both counts. She is young and can say things like "I love DIY" and not sound sarcastic, a trick I have yet to master. I do love DIY, though — no, really, I totally do.

She played a house show with David Dondero in North Oakland, one that had nice barbecued food and attentive punks sitting cross-legged on the hardwood floor. I'd been hearing a bunch about Dondero, though his records hadn't done much for me. Live he was humble and mumbly, plucking the stripped-down acoustic guitar with a clunky rhythm. Semiautobiographical tales of drinking and wandering came fast and flawed, but flaws are charming. He grinned whenever he fucked up or forgot a part and trudged on, ever the underdog.

I like my memory of that night a little more than I like Dondero's The Transient (Future Farmer, out Oct. 7), which has more rocking, full-band numbers. I prefer his songs that sound like a guy alone with his thoughts. There's plenty of the "skinny indie white boy blues" he admits to copping on "Living and the Dead," but there's a keen self-awareness at work, and he owns up to resorting to an "easy rhyme to fill these moments of your time." He's self-deprecating enough to title one of his albums The Pity Party.

The cowpunk angle he must've picked up while drumming for Pensacola, Florida's This Bike Is a Pipe Bomb is fully evident on The Transient, but I have to emphasize that neither band sounds like Wilco. Dondero is too unpolished to be invited to the No Depression party, even if his upcoming full-length includes pretty violins and pristine production values brought by Saddle Creek honcho Mike Mogis. I listen intently to it on headphones in an air-conditioned basement on some fancy Mac, wishing I was outside instead, getting high on the blacktop fumes wafting up through the vagabond imagery. Few things are so shudderingly lovely as the sideswipe of "The Stars Are My Chandelier" and the goofy fruit shout-out of "Less than the Air."

People are always comparing Dondero to bushy-tailed Conor Oberst, or vice versa, but watching him, I start thinking about Paul Westerberg, or even Billy Bragg and his one-man revolution shtick, only it's not really a shtick if you're living it, right? Westerberg, think what you will of "Dyslexic Heart," had the whole epic loser-grandiose drunk thing down to a science, and it provides a blueprint for what Dondero is doing. That seems like a weird thing to aspire to these days, when the scruffy Replacements are so antithetical to the clean-cut All American Rejects. How can those guys possibly be "rejects"? They all look like jockey Jared Letos.

When I think of an all-American reject, Dondero comes to mind. A traveler stuck by default in towns where his truck beaks down, he isn't caught up in the nostalgia of musical Americana. He's the guy who gets to be "authentic," the Kevin Costner of Bull Durham, while Oberst is the Tim Robbins character who gets the glory — and the girl — even if Oberst does sing back-up on The Transient.

It seems possible for Dondero to become more things to more people. But I think what stops that from happening is this idea that we wouldn't want to hear songs about his success and stability. We need hobo punk rockers to warn our children about, object lessons to keep them on the straight and narrow path. I'm sure even the All American Rejects have a retirement plan.

Dondero had to leave the Oakland house show early, hustling over to his bartending job in the Mission District. He told the crowd he's not drinking anymore. The next day Rachel and I parted after lunch. They don't have real burritos where she's from, not good ones anyway, and I wondered what I was sticking around for. I know what burritos taste like. I wanted to watch Oakland shrink in the mirror. ♦

Music to watch out for in September. By Kimberly Chun

Sept. 4

Black Rebel Motorcycle Club The power-user shoegazer throb of Black Rebel Motorcycle Club rings with the sound of the 'burbs — Contra Costa County, to be precise, where bassist-vocalist Robert Turner and guitarist-vocalist and ex-Brian Jonestown Massacre survivor Peter Hayes grew up. Maybe someday the bottom-heavy, distortion-wracked darlings of the British music press will come to their senses and ditch their pseudo-badass Wild One name in favor of the less-embarrassing acronym. 8 p.m., Fillmore, 1805 Geary, S.F. $16.50. (415) 421-TIXS or (415) 346-6000.

posa-disco, '80s new wave, and a whole lotta cheese for the ages). Just D-D-Don't Don't Stop the Beat — as the title of their Atlantic debut goes. Candy-coated party people Jesper Mortensen, a.k.a. Junior, and Jeppe Lauresen, alias Senior, seem destined to flash our pans, rattle us with their pop-locking beats, and shake our coconuts till our ill-conceived composure curdles and falls away — just like our resistance to their cuckoo-for-Yum-Pop anthropomorphized rodents and food groups in the "Move Your Feet" video. Young Heart Attack and Communique also perform. 10 p.m., Bottom of the Hill, 1233 17th St., S.F. $10. (415) 474-0365.

Easy Action Detroit diehard, former Laughing Hyenas howler, and Negative Approach head John Brannon promises to take it nice and hard with his current garage outfit, Easy Action. 25 Suaves and Salem Lights also play. 9 p.m., Thee Parkside, 1600 17th St., S.F. Call for price. (415) 503-0393.

Sept. 5

Junior Senior Danish dance-pop duo Junior Senior have got you covered, sexually (one's gay, the other's straight, and both wanna sing about their differences) and musically (they're a wee bit '50s rockabilly, '60s-style sugar pop, '70s dis-

Manda and the Marbles

New Deal What's new under the sun? The progressive breakbeat of Toronto's New Deal, some say. Now touting a double live CD on Sound + Light, the trio manage to combine the perpetual, spontaneous groove thing of jam bands, the forward thrust of techno, and the trippy bounce of house. 10 p.m., Elbo Room, 647 Valencia, S.F. $10. www.ticketweb.com.

South Austin Jug Band Technically adept and produced by Natalie Maine's dad, Lloyd, Lone Star jug-grass ensemble South Austin Jug Band are as likely to cover Jimi Hendrix, Ernest Tubb, and the Dead as they are to resort to instrumentals titled "Ramen Noodle Rag" and "Cuttin' the Mullet." Starry Plough, 3101 Shattuck, Berk. Call for time and price. (510) 841-2082.

Sept. 6

Manda and the Marbles Bopping merrily along in the nouvelle '80s girl-group land of Blondie, Toni Basil, and Josie Cotton, Manda and the Marbles give high-trash power pop, nasal vocals, and rave-up guitar an '00s makeover, which means they leave well enough alone and stay true to the music's shiny, polished surfaces. The Lewd also play. Kimo's, 1351 Polk, S.F. Call for time and price. (415) 885-4535.

Crown City Rockers, Burning Star Oakland's ever-loveable Crown City Rockers seem to be on a mission to unite hip-hop hopefuls, jazzbos, and soul sibs under one funk. L.A.'s Burning Star take the fusion further, combining rap, reggae, soul, and Middle Eastern sounds. 10 p.m., Elbo Room, 647 Valencia, S.F. $10. www.ticketweb.com.

Casiotone for the Painfully Alone Local lo-fi, cheapie-keys boy Casiotone for the Painfully Alone, otherwise known as Owen Ashworth, cuts the angst and celebrates his new album. The Papercuts and Dead Science also play. 10 p.m., Hemlock Tavern, 1131 Polk, S.F. $6. (415) 923-0923.

Phantom Limbs Those crazed clowns called the Phantom Limbs unleash a second album, Displacement (Alternative Tentacles), on a hapless and perhaps happy public. Produced by Sleepytime Gorilla Museum's Dan Rathbun, Displacement finds the East Bay earful going insane on their trademark carnival organ — good Goth — and howling about the party circuit and public executions. Veronica Lipgloss and the Evil Eyes and the Sixteens also perform. 10 p.m., Bottom of the Hill, 1233 17th St., S.F. $8. (415) 474-0365.

Sept. 8

Grave Brothers Deluxe Former Southerners and present Mission District dwellers, the Grave Brothers Deluxe have their brooding yet accomplished way with a weird tale, singing songs about electrical animals, hate, and firearms. Members have put in time with Thin White Rope, Game Theory, the Residents, Grantlloon Bus, and the Sunshine Club — and it shows. The Life and Times and the Culling Style also play. 9 p.m., Bottom of the Hill, 1233 17th St., S.F. $7. (415) 474-0365.

Sept. 9

Café Tacuba Mexico City's alt-eclecticians bring out Cuatro caminos, their first album since Grammy-garnering double CD Reves / Yo soy, and it's a cocktail of pop, psych, and general weirdness concocted by longtime producer Gustavo Santaolalla, Ween's Andrew Weiss, and Flaming Lips twiddler Dave Fridmann. 8 p.m., Fillmore, 1805 Geary, S.F. $20. (415) 421-TIXS or (415) 346-6000.

Sept. 9-10

Bad Religion You either love 'em or hate 'em, but it's hard to deny the resilience of Brett Gurewitz and Greg Graffin's pet punk project — through success, addiction, and jail time. The new Epitaph CD, The Process of Belief, has the band finding faith amid the ever cycling gerbil wheel of pop culture, working up a lather about materialism and injustice, and finding inspiration in unrelenting rhymes and tightly interlocking harmonies. Jackass plays Sept. 9; Enemy You and Pistol Grip play Sept. 10. 8 p.m., Slim's, 333 11th St., S.F. $25. (415) 522-0333.

FROM THE SIDELINES SARAH HAN

Sept. 11-12

Pretty Girls Make Graves Rising from the remains of Murder City Devils, Death Wish Kids, and Bee Hive Vaults and clutching sundry Smiths references, Pretty Girls continue to make waves with their new Matador CD and sophomore recording, New Romance. Producer Phil Ek brings a certain precision to skittish beat excursions like the title track and "Mr. Club," though it's nice to know the northwestern fivesome still keep things ornery on tracks like "The Grandmother Wolf" and "The Tooth Collector." Sept. 11, 6 p.m., Amoeba Music, 1855 Haight, S.F. (415) 831-1200; with Fuse and Nighthawks Sept. 12, 9 p.m., Cafe du Nord, 2170 Market, S.F. $10. (415) 861-5016.

Sept. 11-14

Terence Blanchard Spike Lee's right-hand composer knows the score. For his next trick, the acclaimed trumpet player turns in a smooth, adept new Blue Note album, Bounce. Most of the recording combo, with the exception of Hammond B-3 and Fender Rhodes man Robert Glasper, comes along for this stint. Sept. 11-13, 8 and 10 p.m.; Sept. 14, 2 and 8 p.m., Yoshi's, 510 Embarcadero West, Oakland. $18-$22. (510) 238-9200.

Sept. 12-13

Mudhoney They were in the garage, mixing it up with grunge, when most of us were in mental, emotional, and psychological, if not actual, diapers. So get ready, here comes another from the snarly nabobs of welcome negativity, their eighth album, Since We've Become Translucent (Sub Pop). Bob Log III and Killer's Kiss play Sept. 12; the Sermon and Canoe play Sept. 13. 10 p.m., Bottom of the Hill, 1233 17th St., S.F. $15. (415) 474-0365.

Sept. 12 and 14

Weed Patch No Rickenbackers were harmed in the making of Weed Patch's album Maybe the Brakes Will Fail (Ohgrowupalready), a folk-rock collaboration between singer-songwriter and journalist Neal Weiss, Gingersol's Seth Rothschild, and players such as Sea Hags' Adam Maples and Minibar's Sid Jordan and Malcolm Cross. Sept. 12, 11 p.m., Ivy Room, 858 San Pablo, Albany. Call for price. (510) 524-9299. Sept. 14, 5 p.m., Thee Parkside, 1600 17th St., S.F. Call for price. (415) 503-0393.

Sept. 13

Party of Helicopters For those of you who are feeling Fragile. The proggy headbangers turned pop melodists of Party of Helicopters crash-land with their latest, superfly Velocette album in tow, Please Believe It. You might even believe. 10 p.m., Hemlock Tavern, 1131 Polk, S.F. $7. (415) 923-0923

Sept. 15-16

Weakerthans, Costantines The Weakerthans' past recordings just seem weak in contrast to their live shows, where they're capable of blowing down emo comers like Promise Ring, as they demonstrated at Slim's last year. What a surprise then that the Toronto-Winnipeg quartet got it right with their fourth full-length, Reconstruction Site (Epitaph), an amiable, multi-textured mélange of carefully crafted pop, rock, punk, cowpoke, and electro burblings. Fellow Canadians the Constantines tap a more passionate vein of politico-punk. Folk This play both nights; Roy play Sept. 16. 9 p.m., Bottom of the Hill, 1233 17th St., S.F. $10-$12. (415) 474-0365.

Sept. 16

Omar Sosa After gathering the inevitable Grammy nominations for his 2002 CD, Sentir, Latin jazz composer, pianist, and past Goldie winner Omar Sosa gets back to the base with his latest solo piano album, A New Life (OTA). He returns to the Bay Area with his quintet after playing Carnegie's Zankel Hall. 7 p.m., African American Art and Cultural Complex, 762 Fulton, S.F. $15. (415) 978-2787.

Sept. 17

The Loins Porch Light series hostess-with-the-most-est Beth Lisick teams up with partner in crime, and life, Eli Crews, for the Loins, a combo that grabbed the audience where it counts at a recent performance that opened the Mission Creek Music Festival. Ral Partha Vogelbacher also plays. 10 p.m., Hemlock Tavern, 1131 Polk, S.F. $6. (415) 923-0923.

Sept. 18

Amon Tobin Down, Cujo. Drum 'n' bass's genre-dicing ninja Amon Tobin looks back with his latest retrospective, Collaborations and Remixes. RJD2 also performs. 9 p.m., Bimbo's 365 Club, 1025 Columbus, S.F. $22. (415) 474-0365.

Sept. 19

Rainer Maria, Denali If Rainer Maria Rilke did time as a college radio-reared indie head bobber, he might have given the double-thumbs-up to his New-York-by-way-of-Madison-Wis. name-sake and their latest album, Long Knives Drawn (Polyvinyl). Rainer Maria's fourth album turns out to be a fervent, open-ended, and rocking workout. The trio meet their match with the passion players of Denali. 9 p.m., Great American Music Hall, 859 O'Farrell, S.F. $12-$14. (415) 885-0750.

Junior Senior

Evan Dando, Rhett Miller, Consonant The heartthrob singer-songwriters group meeting gathers here, with romantic indie rock accompaniment by Mission of Burma bassist Clint Conley's side project, Consonant. 8 p.m., Great American Music Hall, 859 O'Farrell, S.F. $5. (415) 885-0750.

Sept. 27

Kings of Leon, Jet Southern rockers who belong in a concrete kudzu jungle, Kings of Leon tend to push the adenoidal, snot-dappled urban rock of the Lou Reed, Golden Earring, AOR ilk rather than the stuff o' Skynyrd-loving, truck-driving sonuvaguns. Here they get on with the glam-tinged rockers of Jet. 22-20's also play. 9 p.m., Slim's, 333 11th St., S.F. $13. (415) 522-0333.

Sept. 28

Black Eyes Embrace the healthy Dischord and shadowy skronk of D.C.'s Black Eyes — dual bassists and drummers and all. Q and Not U and Antelope also play. 9 p.m., Bottom of the Hill, 1233 17th St., S.F. $7. (415) 474-0365.

Sept. 30

Holly Golightly The raspy-voiced, forever cool, renowned FOWS (Friend of White Stripes), Thee Headcoatees women's auxiliary leader, and grande dame of the garage goes forth with her umpteenth solo release — count 'em, weep, and reap the benefits — Truly She Is None Other (Damaged Goods). KO and the Knockouts also perform. Make-Out Room, 3225 22nd St., S.F. Call for time and price. (415) 647-2888. ♦

Sept. 3 Wednesday

Hot club Tonight Kinky take to the Fillmore's stage with their unfettered, electro-pop dance-party music. The quintet of sexy Monterrey, Mexico, natives have enjoyed meteoric success since the release of their debut album last year, and they've packed music halls across the globe in addition to garnering a Grammy nomination. The band's music draws on elements as far-flung as rockabilly, samba, and traditional Mexican rhythms. Unlike many electronic outfits, their live performances rival the intensity and depth of their recordings; as a result, Kinky's audiences have been hard-pressed to resist dancing frantically to the band's unique sound. If you're still craving south of the border sounds after the show, make your way back to the Fillmore Tuesday (8 p.m.; $20) for Café Tacuba, rock en español mainstays who play a mosh-worthy mix of rock, ska, hip-hop, and funk. 8 p.m., Fillmore, 1805 Geary, S.F. $19.50. (415) 346-6000. (Mirissa Neff)

Sept. 4 Thursday

Media mutiny Do you trust corporate America to control everything you hear, see, and read? If not, you're not alone. Last spring, in a tidal wave of popular outcry, more than two million Americans took the time to tell the Federal Communications Commission they opposed any further relaxation of the rules limiting how much of the TV, print, and radio industries any one company can own. FCC chair Michael Powell (son of you know who) and his two co-Republicans on the commission ignored our concerns and, violating their responsibility to safeguard the public interest, voted June 2 to slash several key media industry regulations — thereby opening the floodgates to unprecedented mergers and even further consolidating a handful of media behemoths' control over news and entertainment. Today the slash-backs go into effect. And although members of Congress have been taking some meager steps to turn back the tide, those moves simply don't go far enough and are by no means a done deal. Join media mutineers from Media Alliance, Global Exchange, Network Against Disinformation, and Code-Pink at a rally in front of KPIX-TV, KGO-TV, and Fox News Channel studios — part of a nationwide protest calling for the reversal of the FCC's roguish handout — and stand up for diverse, accessible, and accountable media. 5 p.m., KPIX-TV, KGO-TV, and Fox News Channel studios, 855 Battery, S.F. Free. (415) 575-5555, info@media-alliance.org, www.reclaimthefcc.org. (Camille T. Taiara)

Strings attached Wherever post-postmodernist leanings abound, there really ought to be some puppetry on hand to make them go down smoothly. Fortunately, there's Lavender Diamond and the Long Armed Lady present Birdsong Bauharoque, a combination of puppetry, performance, film, and lectures based on the philosophical concept of the Bauharoque. In his book Phenomenology of Revelation, artist and philosopher Paul LaFolley proposed the Bauharoque as the "last period in the Modern cycle," a time of unrivaled challenges for humankind just before the advent of the second Dark Ages. The abolition of cynical ideals is a prerequisite to the reclamation of LaFolley's age, so the puppets have their work cut out for them. 8 p.m., Artists' Television Access, 992 Valencia, S.F. $5. (415) 824-3890. (Anup Pradhan)

People on the stage Los Angeles's own-school hip-hoppers People under the Stairs team up with Portland, Ore.'s not-so-secret weapon Lifesavas for a night of bling-free beats with plenty of bounce. On PUTS's just-released Om Records album ...Or Stay Tuned, Double K and Thes One keep the emphasis on kicking back and feeling the groove, not stretching for the next thing so much that they lose the flow. Neither backpack nor indie rap, a PUTS joint is just plain old hip-hop: digging in the crates, looping some beats, and dropping rhymes that make you grin like a fool. Ugly Duckling also play. 9 p.m., Slim's, 333 11th St., S.F. $16. (415) 522-0333. (Peter Nicholson)

In touch Long before John Edward starting crossing over (and even before Dionne Warwick had any psychic friends), fortune-telling proved to be an endlessly fascinating pursuit among the metaphysically curious. In fact, at the turn of the last century, the San Francisco Call newspaper even employed a palmistry editor, one Madame Neergard, who recorded her readings of palms belonging to San Franciscans both distinguished and disreputable. Learn more — like, how was the palmistry page really that different from modern-day astrology columns? — when the Society of California Pioneers hosts a lecture by Meredith Eliassen. The historian discusses 'Palms of Famous People Read by Madame Neergard,' a circa 1899–1903 scrapbook that records a most unusual side of S.F. shortly before "the big one" hit. 6 p.m. (reception 5:30 p.m.), Society of California Pioneers, 300 Fourth St., S.F. Free. (415) 957-1849, www.californiapioneers.org. (Cheryl Eddy)

Sept. 5 Friday

No hate for Tate Blues performer Howard Tate could have used a break about a decade ago when he was coping with the death of his daughter and grappling with homelessness and drug and alcohol addiction. Things have been turning around for Tate of late, though — he gave a stirring performance at last year's San Francisco Blues Festival, and now he has a new album in the bag, Rediscovered (Private Music/

Over the rainbow The ladies of the TilFriday drag cabaret hit the century mark in style with an all-out extravaganza in honor of their 100th performance. The two-part affair kicks off with a "Best of the Special Guests" show, featuring favorite guest performers from TilFriday's past. But the feathers (and rhinestones and faux fur) really begin to fly at midnight, when the core cast — Cockatielia, Sofonda Boyz, Karen Kill, Suppositori Spelling, Holotta Tymes, and the Bay Guardian's own Manley Lennox — reprises TilFriday's most popular show, a twisted homage to The Wizard of Oz. Expect this yellow brick road to be paved with a creative mix of music (the "Tin Woman" warbles "Heart of Glass," "Stop Dragging My Heart

Sept. 6 Saturday

Along the way Photographer Ted Pushinsky's first assignment for his college newspaper was to shoot an anti-Vietnam War demonstration in Manhattan; 35 years later, he shot an anti-Iraq war protest for a German magazine. In between Pushinsky captured the world as it went by in finely nuanced, evocative snapshots he's put together in an exhibit called "Between the Wars," at a bar that sits directly above the Stockton Tunnel. Stop by if you're downtown. Through Oct. 3. Call for hours (reception Sept. 11, 6 p.m.), Tunnel Top, 601 Bush, S.F. Free. (415) 986-8900. (J.H. Tompkins)

Sept. 7 Sunday

From Russia with love Type "Siberia" into any search engine and you'll call up a tourism Web site that reassuringly notes there's more to the region than "frozen tundras and prison camps." Like, for example, Krasnoyarsk, the National Dance Company of Siberia — who save you the trouble of making the trip by performing locally at the Marin Center. The 43-year-old company specializes in folkloric dance (expect much athletic leaping and pirouetting from the male dancers) accompanied by music played on traditional instruments. The show, which also features an exquisite array of costumes, includes the intriguingly titled The Mother-in-Law Had Seven Son-in-Laws, as well as a Cossack dance, Krasny Yar. 3 p.m., Marin Center, Marin Veterans' Memorial Auditorium, Avenue of the Flags at Civic Center, San Rafael. $18–$32. (415) 499-6800. (Eddy)

(reception Sept. 26, noon–2 p.m.). University of San Francisco, 2130 Fulton, S.F. Free. (415) 422-5762, www.usfca.edu/library/thacher. (Eddy)

Sept. 9 Tuesday

Space is the place As the final days of summer expire, no band seems more deserving to pound out the funereal procession than Subarachnoid Space. Their muscular psychedelia and proggy space rock embrace the end of sunshine and flip-flops in the park: the partially improvised guitars and organ droning over compositions bubbling with texture and ambience leave behind the dreamy, lolling season in favor of a more complex, cerebral one. Helios Creed and Captured! by Robots also play. 9 p.m., Cat Club, 1190 Folsom, S.F. $7. (415) 431-3332. (Pradhan)

Sept. 10 Wednesday

Game of life The Lab opens the floodgates on its 20th anniversary season with an appropriately monumental work: Performing Objects Stationed in the Sub World, a new experimental play by noted poet, playwright, and prose writer Carla Harryman. Harryman — a longtime local luminary, though she's now a college prof in Detroit — enjoys a happy (if temporary) homecoming of sorts with the first full-scale production of the play. In typical Harryman fashion, Performing Objects was created collaboratively, with director Jim Cave, visual artist Amy Trachtenberg (set and costume designer), and musician Erling Wold (whose score incorporates operatic and avant-garde elements). The work traverses the borders of cities and suburbs, delving into relationships between people who confront each other under various circumstances. Exploratory and probing, and aiming to "describe an inter-cultural social conscience," Harryman's latest will

Hot spot

The San Francisco Fringe Festival — along with all fringe festivals, actually (there's a loosely linked international network of them) — occupies a space of its own in the world of theater. The fest has unique fans (many of whom rarely go to other theater events during the year) who approach the shows with a good-spirited expectation that colors the entire event. On a weekend evening, you'll find crowds walking through the Tenderloin from venue to venue (every hour or so — all works are 60 minutes or less), talking and laughing like they've just left a party. This is theater without white gloves and evening wear; the festival lineup is uncensored, meaning that most shows are selected by a lottery of some sort and go up sight unseen. That also means the performances, which can take any size, shape, or style, are sometimes amateurish, sometimes anarchic, and often created and performed in the same freewheeling spirit audiences bring with them. This year's fest features some 56 plays, performed over 11 days — and truth be told, what I know about them isn't much. I am familiar with one performer — Liebe Wetzel, who, with her company, Lunatique Fantastique, has never met an object that couldn't be turned into a puppet, nor has she made a puppet that couldn't be used to create some imaginative theater. Overall, the Fringe is cheap and fun: life should always be like that. Through Sept. 14. Mon.–Fri., 7, 8:30, and 10 p.m. (also Fri., 11:30 p.m.); Sat., shows run 1–11:30 p.m.; Sun., 11:30 a.m.–8:30 p.m. Various venues, S.F. $8 or less per show (10-show pass, $55). (415) 673-3847, www.sffringe.org. (J.H. Tompkins)

no doubt delight her old-school fans, while also offering neophytes a chance to be properly introduced. Through Sept. 27. Opens tonight, 8 p.m.; runs Thurs.–Fri. (also Sept. 20, 27; no show Sept. 11), 8 p.m., Lab, 2948 16th St., S.F. $10–$20. (415) 864-8855, www.thelab.org. (Eddy)

The Bay Guardian listings deadline is two weeks prior to our Wednesday publication date. To submit an item for consideration, please include the title of the event, date and time, venue name, street address (listing cross streets only is not sufficient), city, telephone number readers can call for more information, telephone number for media, admission costs, and a brief description of the event. Send information to Listings, the Bay Guardian Building, 135 Mississippi St., S.F., CA 94107; fax to (415) 487-2506, or e-mail (no attachments, please) to listings@sfbg.com. # THE BEER THAT LAUNCHED A THOUSAND BEERS.

The top ten beers in the world all share a secret past. In 1842, a revolutionary brewer named Josef Groll brewed the first pilsner beer in the historic Czech town of Pilsen. That beer was Pilsner Urquell, or “original source of Pilsner.” Over the next hundred years, many other breweries throughout the world tried to copy Groll’s pilsner brewing method. Some were better than others, but none were as good as the original. Try a Pilsner Urquell and you’ll see why those other breweries would prefer that their secret past remain a secret.

ARE YOU HOT?

We're seeking 10
sizzling-hot people to strut their stuff in our upcoming sex issue. Do you fit one of the categories below? Are you ready to show off? Then send us your picture with some vital stats. A panel of experts in beauty, fierceness, and fashion will judge whether you are the hottest of them all. If you win, your picture will be featured in the paper and you'll get a free dinner out and massage or other great entertainment certificates.

We will be offering awards for hotness in the following categories:

B-boy or B-girl • Tattoo Addict
Castro Clone • Bear • Baby Dyke
Drag King • Financial District
HonchoGym Bunny • Indie Rocker
Clean-cut Nonprofit Worker

Entry Form:

Name: _____

Phone: _____

Address: _____

Please answer the following questions:

1. Which category do you wish to enter?
2. What is your hottest feature?
3. What are your measurements?
4. Where is the best place to find you on a Saturday night?
5. What song is guaranteed to make you cry?

Please include a full-length photo.

Deadline for submissions is Sept. 10.
You will not receive a prize if you do not include your name, phone number, and address!

Send your entry to:

Raphael Saadiq

Ruby Skye, Aug. 20

It had been six years since singer-guitarist Raphael Saadiq left Tony Toni Tóné — the most successful Bay Area R&B group of the past decade — but for a quarter of the 36-year-old neo-soul architect's sold-out two-hour Ruby Skye performance, the old gang was back doing their funky Oakland stroke. Not only were the two other Tonys — Saadiq's brother, singer-guitarist D'Wayne Wiggins, and their cousin, keyboardist Timothy Christian — on hand for a handsomely harmonized reunion that included such favorites as "(Lay Your Head on My) Pillow," "Whatever You Want," "It Never Rains (in Southern California)," and "Anniversary," but longtime TTT sideman Elijah Baker was also back popping the bass and offering a bit of his signature slapstick break dancing. And for "Let's Get Down," they were joined by Compton rapper DJ Quick, who delivered some old-school rhymes and sprayed the crowd with a celebratory blast of champagne.

It was a nearly blow-by-blow replay of the show Saadiq recorded July 3 at House of Blues in Los Angeles. Set for release as a double CD in October and as a DVD early next year, the performance combined TTT's hits with much of the material from last year's brilliant Instant Vintage, a solo CD that was a relative commercial failure but earned Saadiq such respect from his peers that they nominated it for four Grammys. (He won none for the album, though he did land one for a song he wrote and produced for Erykah Badu.)

The evening's most stunning aural and visual moments came when band member Kelvin Wooten left the keyboard he'd been manning, hoisted a sousaphone over his shoulders, and strutted to a stage-front mike. Wooten, wearing a blue-and-white marching band uniform, gave a nicely syncopated bounce to Saadiq's lilting "Still Ray."

"You'll never have to beg me, baby," the thin singer moaned during the tune's vamp in reedy tenor tones dripping with gospel-imbued urgency. Saadiq seems determined to restore the tuba to its place in African American popular music, much as the banda music that inspired him has found a niche in Mexican pop. Such a move places Saadiq on the cutting edge of R&B, and even though radio was cold to his solo album, the fact that he remains in demand as a producer for such artists as Badu, D'Angelo, Nappy Roots, and Angie Stone affirms his continuing relevance.

Saadiq, who made his entrance in black formal attire and a red bow tie, sadly played little guitar during the show due to technical difficulties, but Wiggins (on the TTT segment) and sidemen Rob Bacon and Charlie Berell gave his songs just the right gospeldelic edge with their rippling rhythm guitar patterns, as did Dean Charles with his churchy B-3 organ. The tight seven-man band was joined throughout by three harmony singers (including Millie Jackson's daughter Keisha) and, on three selections, by vocalist Joi, the sassy Saadiq protégée who'd replaced Dawn Robinson in his short-lived group Lucy Pearl. Other guests from the L.A. date — including D'Angelo and Bay Area divas Ledisi and Goapele — were missing from the San Francisco lineup.

The show was a homecoming for Saadiq, who left his native Oakland for Sacramento a decade ago and now lives in southern California. Unfortunately for the 900 fans who paid $39.50 apiece, the engagement ran far less smoothly than the one he did last summer at Bimbo's 365 Club. Ruby Skye kept its front doors closed an hour past the time they were scheduled to open, leaving customers standing in line along Mason Street. Once inside, they found seats very few and far between. The show, slated to begin at 9 p.m., kicked off an hour later with a set by Baby Jaymes, a 24-year-old Oaklander who imaginatively fused Curtis Mayfield-like soul singing and hardcore hip-hop with help from two rapping hype men and prerecorded tracks heavy with church organ. A long intermission was followed by a track-backed set from Rhode Island soul crooner Jon B., who had the voice of an angel and the demeanor of a baggy b-boy. Then came another intermission, during which the stage was pelted with cups, ice, and other objects. Saadiq and company finally hit at 11:30, an hour and a half past their scheduled start time. The folks at KMEL-FM, who produced the show, might well ask for some tips in professionalism from their Clear Channel corporate brethren over at Bill Graham Presents. (Lee Hildebrand)

City of angles

By Vivian Host

The way everyone talks about Los Angeles, you'd think the city had given them an enema of gold dust followed by a lobotomy. The next person who tells me how rad, cutting-edge, and footloose and fancy-free it is to live in Echo Park is going to get their foot — encased in an obligatory limited-edition Adidas reissue — run over by my Honda Accord.

I grew up in L.A., and I admit the city has changed for the better, but it's still true that for every dope little coffee shop, hipster-overrun art show, and sunshine-filled day, there's a maniacal driver, thick smog cloud, or mentally ill thug waiting to ruin your day. The big secret about L.A. is that 80 percent of the people I know who live there barely ever get out of their house, although they can recite a list of all the cool spots around town.

In any case, L.A. is going through somewhat of a renaissance right now: there are tons of art galleries opening up, the clubs are popping, and it's actually becoming a "destination" for people younger than 35. It reminds me of a time in the early '90s when San Francisco was the shit. My friends used to drive up almost every other weekend to go to a full moon party in Half Moon Bay, some Basics warehouse rave in an old armory, or a Sunset free party on a Sunday afternoon at the Berkeley Marina. The point is, rather than getting all sour that San Francisco's scene is a little sluggish at the moment, people should just drive to L.A. It's not that far, and after a few days of mini-golf, drinking at Los Feliz's Asian-themed Good Luck Club, and getting jiggy at the Chocolate Bar, you'll be ready to come home, where going out for Indian pizza or drinks is as easy as picking up your dirty jeans off the floor and walking down the street. Best of all, if you actually stay in San Francisco, you can apply for veteran status and join the likes of Toph One, Jonah and Billee Sharp, and Future Primitive's Mark Herlihy and the many others gunning to be the lifers of the club scene. We salute you!

And speaking of Toph, why not try one of his favorite pastimes, happy hour? If you start drinking right after work, you can (theoretically) go home early and stave off the 8 a.m. hangover. The ladies of DJ crew Sister S.F. have started a free Thursday night at Wish, Your Sister's Hour, featuring Queen Agnes B, Lejla, and rotating guests in a mash-up of house, breaks, '80s, and stuff. Flyer mavens Brittany and Regan of YBR Promotions are doing a new night at the Public. Stop off before heading to Studio Z or Slim's to hear rotating guests from around town play experimental hip-hop and down-tempo, plus everything else from the Who to ambient drum 'n' bass. The night is geared toward music-industry heads and club promoters, so fledgling DJs, bring your mixed CD (hint, hint). Plus Eskr and his boys play drum 'n' bass Tuesdays, at Solution, down at your old favorite and mine, the Top. And then there are the other favorites: Qoöl at 111 Minna on Wednesdays and Vroom at El Rio on Mondays for trance and sheer revelry, respectively.

And finally, anniversaries are a big deal for clubs, since it's hard to last a month in this town, much less a few years. Candles and strippers jumping out of cakes go out to drum 'n' bass, ghetto tech, and general-mayhem night Compression, which celebrated three years Aug. 31 with Wee Man from Jackass, Marky and XRS from V Recordings, and a whole lot of drunken high jinks. At the DNA Lounge, progressive trance and house crew Brainchild from the South Bay celebrate seven years this month with their Orgy party. Over and out.

Qoöl. Wednesdays, 5-10 p.m., 111 Minna Gallery, 111 Minna, S.F. $5. (415) 974-1719.
Vroom. Mondays, 8 p.m.-midnight, El Rio, 3158 Mission, S.F. $1. (415) 282-3325.

Orgy. With St. John, Raoul Kahn, BB Hayes, and others, Sat/6, 10 p.m.-4 a.m., DNA Lounge, 375 11th St., S.F. (415) 626-1409.

THE NYC HIP HOP THEATER FESTIVAL, IN ASSOCIATION WITH YOUTH SPEAKS, LA PEÑA CULTURAL CENTER & YERBA BUENA CENTER FOR THE ARTS PRESENT:

The First Bay Hip-Hop Theater Festival

PREVIEW
SEPT. 12/2003 - SEPT. 14/2003

Yerba Buena Center for the Arts Forum
701 Mission St @ 3rd Street, SF

"Shorts: An Evening of Emerging Artists" Featuring home grown and international artists in a unique setting, the opening night of the 1st Bay Hip-Hop Theater Festival promises to be a fun filled and exciting evening. Bamuthi in his premiere solo work "Word Becomes Flesh", Hanifah Walidah's hilarious look at her Oakland community in "Black Folks Guide to Black Folks", Melinda Corazon Foley's "Coconut Masquerade" follows a mixed-race pinay child into the depths of her family's hidden shame... Finally, hailing from the UK, Jonzi D in "Lyrikal Fearta", examines what life is like in the belly of East London.
8:00 PM - Tickets: $20.00

FESTIVAL DESCRIPTION:
The organizers of the NYC Hip-Hop Theater Festival (HHTF) are teaming up with Yerba Buena Center for the Arts, La Peña Cultural Center, Youth Speaks and the San Francisco International Arts Festival to present a preview of the 1st Bay Area Hip-Hop Theater Festival. For three days some of the best and brightest actors, playwrights and dancers in Hip-Hop Theater from New York, California, Washington, DC and Europe will converge upon the Bay. Come see theater that celebrates the language and stories of the hip-hop generation and culture. Purchase tickets online, in person or by phone via Yerba Buena Center for the Arts - 701 Mission St. @ 3rd Street, Call 415-978-ARTS (2787) or visit www.hiphoptheaterfest.com or www.YerbaBuenaArts.org

La Peña Cultural Center
3105 Shattuck Ave., Berkeley, CA 94705

Panel Discussion: Gimmicks v. Lyrics: Defining the Hip-Hop Theater Aesthetic(s) The debate rages on, is Hip-Hop Theater a viable genre? Or is it simply contemporary American Theater with an urban twist. Does it need a new name? Or is the name only a marketing ploy for the opportunists? How do artists who operate within the form define it for themselves and how do their peers define it for them? Come learn more. 1:00PM - FREE

701 Mission St @ 3rd Street, SF

Will Power in "Flow" Conceived, written and performed by the Bay Area's own Will Power, FLOW is the tale of seven storytellers, their quest for survival in a world of modern, urban pitfalls, and the search for a new language to make age-old lessons endure for a younger generation. Through potent, thought-provoking rhymes and original beats FLOW speaks to a precious, ancient resource with roots in the African tradition of the griot - the art of storytelling and the wisdom of life's lessons found in every good story. 8:00 PM - Tickets: $20.00

Youth Speaks,
2169 Folsom Street, San Francisco, CA 94110

Workshop: Educational Theater & Hip Hop: Building Classroom Identity Educational Theater has proven to be an effective tool in addressing socially relevant issues for young people, its can help in building dialogue and trust amongst peers and adults. Learn basic theater exercises for the classroom and find out how to bring Educational Theater Workshops into your classroom. 11:00 AM - FREE

Workshop: Flip the Script: The Playwrighting Workshop Students interested in writing can take the opportunity to learn about story structure, character development and dialogue in this "junior master class", taught by some of the heavyweights in Hip-Hop Theater. 2:30 PM - FREE

Note: You must RSVP for the Workshops, seating is limited. To RSVP email info@youthspeaks.org or call 415-255-9035

Yerba Buena Center for the Arts Forum
701 Mission St @ 3rd Street, SF

Hip Hop Theatre Junction's "Rhyme Deferred" Rhyme Deferred is a modern day spin on the biblical tale of Cain and Abel, this modern day fairy tale highlights the struggle between the hip hop underground and the mainstream's commercialization of hip hop culture and music. Rhyme Deferred seamlessly fuses hip-hop performance elements of DJing, B-Boying, rhyme and text to weave an exciting mythical journey. 8:00 PM - Tickets: $20.00

STUDIO Z - 314 11th St. # Folsom

"Second Sundays" The official Hip-Hop Theater Festival After-Party, featuring Danny Hoch, musical guests Zion I and DJ Sake One. 21 and up w/ I'd $7 b4 9PM, $12 After, $7 all night w/ Festival Ticket Stub For info call: 415-252-7100

Hammerdown Turpentine inhabit a land where the water tastes like Jim Beam and the skies are not cloudy all day. Your body has never shook so hard to the sound of 31 acoustic strings: guitar/banjo/bass/fiddle all soaring over a blanket of electric Wuritzer piano and brushed small-kit motion. Add to this a front man who dishes it out like David Yow with a sturdier belt and you have the most mind expanding group to ever leave the screen door open. Pre-war and punked out and face down in the mud — you might say the Butthole Surfers meets the Incredible String Band, but then I'd have to poke you with my "stick." — Clark Mosher

Rasco

Escape from Alcatraz (Coup d'Etat)

Bay Area native Rasco made his mark in 1997 with "The Unassisted," a solid 12-inch, and followed it with his outstanding debut album, Time Waits for No One (Stones Throw). His straight-ahead rap style and in-your-face rhymes — and his association with Peanut Butter Wolf — made him one of the more interesting MCs in the then-thriving West Coast underground. Six years down the road, he has dropped an EP, The Birth (1999), worked in Call Agents, produced a second solo LP, Hostile Environment, and has now released a third, Escape from Alcatraz. At this point Rasco's strength is his tenacity. On Escape, you'll find that Rasco feels like he's finally made the album he's always wanted to make. His rhymes haven't changed much over the years — Escape is full of boasting and boxing metaphors. But the music is another story: the beats are understated and subtly infectious. Listen once and you're not sure why you want to play it again. Listen twice and you realize the simple drum, bass, guitar groove on "The Sweet Science" has been stuck in your brain and won't go away. The same is true for "Get Your Guards Up"; while Rasco declares he's "the kind of dude who will come fuck your town up," it's the simple, funky R&B backing he's rapping over that stays with you. Escape won't make him a star, but it's good enough that he's not likely to disappear, either. Rasco plays a record-release party Sat/6, Milk, S.F. (415) 387-6455. (J.H. Tompkins)

Sonny Smith

This Is My Story, This Is My Song (Jackpine Social Club)

Sonny Smith's music is not your run-of-the-mill singer-songwriter stuff. On his second album, This Is My Story, This Is My Song, the San Francisco native evokes Southern hilltop towns and spooky pines as much as mumbling street-corner poets and boozy urban bars. It's country blues meets sidewalk stream of consciousness.

Melodically, Smith's songs have the aura of simplicity. They move at their own sweet pace, shifting direction emotionally with almost every turn of phrase and doing so as effortlessly as a coastal breeze. Smith's smoky voice and gentle guitar are augmented by banjo, accordion, fiddle, and dreamy vocal harmonies, while the rhythms maintain a low profile. More character sketches than straight narratives, the lyrics are a smart tangle of words that conjure kooky smiles and introspective moments of brazen honesty.

Some lines seem like non sequiturs ("Mona Lisa I can't stand her smile / Am I the only one that likes a good flood?"), and at times the melodies appear to wander. Truth is, though, the songs would never have gotten this far without a blueprint born of Smith's sharp musical mind. He's a comfortable, confident songwriter, adept at creating rich images and knowing when a song needs quiet and open space. These are songs that breathe. (Kurt Wolff)

museums

Asian Art Museum 200 Larkin; 581-3500, www.asianart.org. Tues-Sun, 10am-5pm (Thurs, 10am-9pm). $10, $7 seniors, $6 for ages 12 to 17, free for 11 and under. "AsiaAlive": "Indonesia Now!" (Through Sun/7); and "Contemporary Indonesian Art" (Sept 9-14), artist demonstrations and hands-on art activities (daily, noon-4pm). California Historical Society 678 Mission; 357-1848. Wed-Sat, noon-4:30pm. $3, $1 seniors and students, free for six and under and members. "At Work: The Art of California Labor." An overview of labor themes in 20th Century California art. Through Dec 20. California Palace of the Legion of Honor Lincoln Park (near 34th Ave and Clement); 863-3330. Tues-Sun, 9:30am-5pm. $8, $6 seniors, $5 for ages 12 to 17, free for 10 and under (free Tues). "Black and White: Prints from the 1970s and 1980s." More than 20 prints by Richard Diebenkorn, Wayne Thiebaud, Chuck Close, Ellsworth Kelly, Brice Marden, Bryan Hunt, and Robert Arneson. Through Sept 28.

Cartoon Art Museum 655 Mission; CAR-TOON. Tues-Sun, 11am-5pm. $6, $4 students and seniors, $2 for ages 6 to 12, free for members and children five and under. "Alternative to What? Comic Art of the Free Weeklies" When the Village Voice launched the nation's first major alternative news weekly in 1955, it included a comic strip called Feiffer, which ended up running for 42 years and inspiring an entire genre of alt-weekly cartooning. This exhibition features Feiffer and 13 other respected strips. Weekly cartoonists have the freedom to be more political, more intellectual, and less concerned about offending their readers than their daily-paper counterparts; many of the strips on display are almost dauntingly text-heavy, with nary a cute animal or little kid to be seen. As with any Cartoon Art Museum show, it's exciting to get so close to the original drawings and examine the evidence of the artist's hand and working process. Through Oct 5. (Westbrook) "Great Comic Cats." An exhibition of original cartoon art featuring cat characters, including Garfield, Krazy Kats, Bill the Cat, Hobbes, Sylvester, and Mooch. Through Oct 26. "From off the Streets of Cleveland Comes American Splendor." Works by comic book writer Harvey Pekar illustrated by five underground comic book artists. Through Nov 23.

Exploratorium 3601 Lyon; 563-7337. Tues-Sun, 10am-5pm. $10, $7.50 students and seniors, $6 youths, free for three and under. "Animal Magnetism." An exhibit focusing on our relationship with animals through displays and artworks from the 19th century to the present. Through Sept 28.

Mexican Museum Fort Mason Center, Bldg D, Marina at Laguna; 441-0404. Wed-Fri, 11am-5pm, free. "The Fantastic and the Familiar: Works on Paper from the Permanent Collection," more than 20 prints by eight modern Mexican artists. Through Sept 27. Museum of Craft and Folk Art Fort Mason Center, Bldg A, Marina at Laguna; 775-0991. Sat, 10am-5pm; Tues-Fri, Sun, 11am-5pm (first Wed, 11am-7pm). $4, $3 seniors, free for 18 and under (free first Wed and Sat, 10am-noon). "Revealing Influences: Conversations with Bay Area Artists." New work by twenty Bay Area artists including Amy Berk, Frank Haines, Jason Mecier, Charles Linder, Rigo 03, Jarrett Mitchell and Mary Elizabeth Yarbrough, Midori Harima, and Becky Schaefer. Through Nov 15.

San Francisco Museum of Modern Art 151 Third St; 357-4000. Fri-Tues, 10am-6pm (Fri, 10am-9pm); Thurs, 10am-9pm. $10, $7 seniors, $6 students, free for 12 and under and members (free first Tues; half price Thurs, 6-9pm). "ROY/design series 1." ## 'The Art of Machines'

Through Oct. 4, Rx Gallery

Simple in concept and beautiful in execution, Bruce Cannon's Reflection steals the show at the Rx Gallery's second-ever exhibition, "The Art of Machines." For Cannon, the piece represents the beginning of what will be a series of life-documentation tools/artworks. Its main components are a Windows PC, a flat-panel monitor, a digital camera, and an ornate gilt frame. Periodically, the viewer is supposed to face the work, gaze into its camera-eye, and snap a picture, which will be added to the database of images displayed as a slide show in the framed LCD (for this exhibition, Cannon has loaded the hard drive with pictures of himself taken over the course of Reflection's three-month development cycle). It's an ingenious digital-age twist on The Picture of Dorian Gray: a truth collector that combines subjective human vanity with the objective honesty of a machine. You can't help wanting one of your own, but you also can't avoid wondering whether you would really carry out its intended function once you brought it home. Imagine bad-hair days and puffy-eyed mornings ruthlessly captured and relentlessly broadcast with no opportunity for retouching. Ultimately, that is what Reflections is really about: the reduction of time and life to a few cold pixels and the question of whether its subjects will be strong enough to face the decay nature inevitably wreaks. Other standout works include Christian Ristow's Mouth, a kinetic sculpture that uses hydraulics and weapon components to create unsettling noise and motion (don't put your hand in there!); David Bowen's 50 Drones, a subtle comment on human group behavior using vibrating aluminum and PVC units; and Seemen's Monkey on Your Back, a wearable sculpture that translates motions and biorhythms into movement. Wed.-Sat., noon-5 p.m., 132 Eddy, S.F. (415) 860-6455. (Lindsey Westbrook)

The Fall River Axe Murders Magic Theatre, Northside stage, Fort Mason Center, Bldg D, Marina at Laguna; 437-6775. $27. Wed/3-Sat/6, 8pm; Sun/7, 3pm. Word for Word's verbatim staging of gothic writer Angela Carter's take on Lizzie Borden, America's own gothic sweetheart, casts light on the question in the darker regions of the Protestant ethic and on the spirit of decapitation. A subtle and darkly funny tale unfolds in a sweltering New England town in 1892 that, in probing the enduring mystery of the motive, fingers not only the deranged Lizzie (a dangerous-looking Stephanie Hunt), her voracious stepmother (Amy Kossov), and her miserly but indulgent father (an impressively severe John Balma), but also a patriarchal order as stifling as those preposterous Victorian outfits. While not quite explaining Lizzie, Carter does make her of our world, not some ghost story. (Avila)

The Graduate Curran Theatre, 445 Geary; 512-7770, www.bestofbroadway-sf.com. $37-75. Wed/3-Sat/6, 8pm (also Wed/3 and Sat/6, 2pm); Sun/7, 2pm. See A&E review.

Kilt New Conservatory Theatre Center, 25 Van Ness; 861-8972, www.nctcsf.org. $18-38. Wed-Sat, 8pm; Sun, 2pm. Through Oct 12. Jonathan Wilson's romantic comedy reconciles a mother and son through their mutual acceptance of the past. Esther (Cheryl Smith), a stern Scottish dance instructor and Canadian immigrant, drags her culturally Canadian son, Tom (Colin Stuart), away from his job as a kilt-clad table dancer at a gay nightclub, to the Glasgow funeral of his grandfather, a war hero he never knew. There are few real surprises under Kilt's colorful but predictable patterns. Moreover, the relationships don't always feel credible, and the second act sprawls a bit. But director Stephen Rupsch gets a lot from the snappy dialogue thanks to five sharp, sympathetic performances, especially Smith's proud but well-meaning Esther. (Avila)

Love's Labour's Lost New venue: Golden Gate Park, West of the Conservatory of Flowers; www.sfshakes.org. Free. Sat-Sun, 1:30pm. Through Sept 21. Show continues at various Bay Area parks through Oct 5. The San Francisco Shakespeare Festival presents its annual "Free Shakespeare in the Park" offering.

ManLady New Conservatory Theatre Center, 25 Van Ness; 861-8972, www.nctcsf.org. $18-28. Wed/3-Sat/6, 8pm; Sun/7, 2pm. In his autobiographical solo, George Weiss Vando demonstrates his talent for moving between multifarious identities: from himself as a boy running around in a Superman cape

(which in his imagination is really a Wonder Woman cape), to the mother who wants to understand her son, to himself as an attractive, seven-foot-tall-in-heels drag queen lip-synching to Alanis Morissette. Weiss, with the help of Sue Hamilton's direction, displays a keen awareness of the subtleties that form an integral part of anyone's outward personality. But while Weiss shifts adroitly between accents, postures, facial expressions, and gestures to tell his stories, the anecdotes themselves don't always come together as smoothly. The first third of the show, despite a tender portrayal of maternal angst, is a familiar coming-out narrative. Things pick up when Weiss, donning a sexy red dress and showing off his pole-dancing skills from years of professional drag, talks about misogyny in the gay community and seeks new definitions of masculinity. His answers aren't revolutionary, but the questioning itself adds something worthwhile to a familiar genre. (Shalson)

'Pandemonium! An Evening in Hell with David Mamet and Gertrude Stein' Theatre Rhinoceros, 2926 16th St; 861-5079. $12-15. Thurs-Sat, 8:30pm (no show Thurs/4); Sun, 7:30pm. Through Sept 14. Custom Made Theatre Company performs Bobby Gould in Hell (by David Mamet) and Doctor Faustus Lights the Lights (by Gertrude Stein).

Phantom of the Opera Orpheum Theatre, 1192 Market; 512-7770, www.bestofbroadway-sf.com. $30-85. Wed/3-Sat/6, 8pm (also Wed/3, Sat/6, 2pm); Sun/7, 2pm. Andrew Lloyd Webber's irrevocable musical theater juggernaut returns to San Francisco for a limited engagement in a new touring production. The show is, of course, based on Gaston Leroux's novel about a masked musical maniac (Brad Little) hovering along the flies and under the floorboards of the Paris Opera House, wreaking mischief and worse, who falls recklessly in love with his protégée, a beautiful soprano (Lisa Vroman). Directed by Harold Prince, Phantom wields quite an array of eye-widening sets, costumes, and effects (including, in addition to the infamous chandelier, the elaborate opéra bouffe, the spooky boat ride across a foggy lagoon, and the impressively decked-out "Masquerade" sequence). Given the limits of the story and the music (and why, anyway, would a creature laden with musical genius indulge so many sappy songs?), it is the spectacle that haunts. (Avila)

Scabaret! (Scab in the Family) Xenodrome, 1320 Potrero; 285-9366. $10-15. Wed/3-Sat/6, Sept 10-13, 19-20, 26-27, 9pm. Through Sept 27. The performance troupe presents their eponymous "shock-rock opera," an exploration of the dark side of America.

Sleeping with Straight Men Theatre Rhinoceros, 2926 16th St; 861-5079. $20-30. Wed-Sat, 8pm; Sun, 7pm (also Sun, 3pm). Through Sept 21. Dan Renzi (of MTV's The Real World) stars in Ronnie Larsen's comedy.

Spanked! New Conservatory Theatre Center, 25 Van Ness; 861-8972, www.nctcsf.org. $15-20. Fri-Sat, 8pm (also Sat, 10pm); Sun, 2pm (also Sept 14, 4pm). Through Sept 14. The New Conservatory Theatre Center presents real-life couple Ian MacKinnon and Aaron Hartzler in their play about their relationships with their fathers.

Thirst Thick House, 1695 18th St; 401-8081, www.thickdescription.org. $15-25. Thurs-Sun, 8pm. Through Sept 21. Thick Description performs the world premiere of Neena Beber's play set in the world of contemporary art collecting (loosely based on the Henry James novel Roderick Hudson).

A Thunderbird Night of Terror Phoenix Theatre, 414 Mason, Ste 601; 289-6766, www.ticketweb.com. $17. Thurs-Mon, 8pm. Through Sept 20. Thunderbird Theatre Company's Night of Terror lives up to its name. During six shorts, the cast machetes its way through a variety of gory themes that would make any B-movie aficionado foam at the mouth. By staging — and using liberal dashings of fake blood and fright masks — the ritual sacrifice of virgins, drill-wielding homicidal maniacs running amok, and Satan sodomizing unsuspecting Satanists, very little is left to the imagination. The actors, as if obeying a constant stage direction to "ham it up and shout a lot," rush around madly, yelling their overlabeled lines as if performing before an audience of 500 rather than 50. About as subtle as a severed ear swimming about in a vat of blood (and considerably less amusing), the performance, though misguided and ill-conceived, makes plain the violent strain in our hysterical, gore-mongering society. CONTEMPORARY ART EXPLORES HUMAN GENOMICS

August 27 - December 7, 2003

Five years after the mapping of human DNA comes Gene(sis)— a major exhibition exploring contemporary artists' visions of a genomic future. From glowing bacteria to "manimals" and genes for sale, Gene(sis) goes beyond the science to examine our hopes, fears, and dreams of a genetically modified world.

IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE EXHIBITION:

Genetic Screenings — a thought-provoking series of feature films, documentaries, and experimental shorts that examine cinema's fascination with the human genome, from Island of Lost Souls (1932) to cult favorite Gattaca. Thursdays, 7:30 p.m. at the PFA Theater. Series runs 9/4 — 10/31.

Thinking through Genomics — a lecture series and panel discussion bringing leading scientists and academics together with contemporary artists around the issue of human genomic research and its implications. Series begins 9/28 at the Museum Theater.

sider" Josh Kornbluth premieres his latest monologue, recounting the famed nonconformist's "detour into the system" through the U.S. tax code. In his familiar conversational style, replete with acute observations, Spaulding Gray-like epiphanies, and visual aids, Kornbluth revisits his relationship with his beloved father, the eccentric communist celebrated in Red Diaper Baby. Unfortunately, in measuring the distance he must travel from his father's ideals to cope with a new relationship and new responsibilities, the show ends up dwelling on a less interesting cast of characters. (Avila)

Master Harold ... and the Boys Oakland Metro, 201 Broadway, Oakl; (510) 534-9529, www.oaklandmetro.org. $10-18. Fri/5-Sat/6, 8pm; Sun/7, 7pm. Based on an incident from his childhood in the early days of apartheid, Athol Fugard's most personal play is also one of his most supple: the story of a fateful day in the relationship between a white South African teenager and the two black family servants who raised him; a damning portrait of a barbaric social system; a subtle and compelling exploration of the psychology of power; a meditation on parenting, the nature of social reform, and the role of education, and more. The fruitful collaboration between Oakland Public Theater and Second Wind Productions has resulted in a powerful, altogether impressive treatment that shows small theater at its best. Director Manu Mukasa coaxes beautifully measured performances from his fine cast, capturing the humor, compassion, and unswerving honesty of the play, while building seamlessly to its wrenching climax and wistful, agonized denouement. (Avila)

A Midsummer Night's Dream Forest Meadows Outdoor Amphitheater, Grand Ave, Dominican University, San Rafael; (415) 499-4488. $13-25. Fri/5-Sun/7, 8pm (also Sun/7, 4pm). Marin Shakespeare Company performs Shakespeare's romantic comedy, with a cast that includes a trained canine named Bonzer as Starveling's Dog.

Mother Courage and Her Children John Hinkel Park, Southampton between San Diego and Somerset, Berk; (510) 704-8210, www.shotgunplayers.org. Free. Sat-Sun, 4pm (Sept 13 show at Live Oak Park, Berryman between Shattuck and Walnut, Berk). Through Sept 14.

Judging by Shotgun Players' terrific production, Bertold Brecht's antiwar masterpiece Mother Courage and Her Children remains as fresh and vital to our day as it was to the war-ravaged 1940s. The play, set in the waning decades of the 17th century's Thirty Years War, focuses on Anna Fierling (a witty and commanding Trish Mulholland), a merchant woman known as "Mother Courage" because she once raced her canteen wagon across a battlefield to rescue her perishable inventory. Offering Mother Courage as its annual free outdoor performance, Shotgun Players knows what it's doing with Brecht, both politically and aesthetically. Under the astute care of artistic director Patrick Dooley, Mother Courage resists the maudlin and, for all of the genuine sadness the play evokes, conveys a stirring wit. (Avila)
Twelfth Night, or What You Will Old Mill Park, 375 Throckmorton, Mill Valley; (510) 845-4007. Free. Sat/6-Sun/7, 2pm. Curtain Theatre takes Shakespeare's cross-dressing comedy outdoors.

8pm; Sun, 7pm. $13-25. The YBCA Wattis artist in residence and his company perform. Thurs-Fri, the program includes Choke and Winter Belly, and Sat-Sun, the program includes world premiere Lawn. Part of the San Francisco International Arts Festival.

Mark Morris Dance Group

Sept. 4-14, Zellerbach Hall

Mark Morris's L'allegro, il pensiero, ed il moderato (1988) just may be his best piece ever. It's most certainly a major accomplishment by a major American choreographer — and it's also a great season opener for Cal Performances. Never before in his career had Morris attempted such a large-scale, full-evening endeavor. But then he never had the resources to try. He had to go to Brussels, Belgium's state-supported opera house, the Théâtre Royal de la Monnaie, to get enough rehearsal time and space, a full orchestra, and a stage big enough to really stretch his musical and kinetic muscles. At L'allegro's premiere, the Belgians were, to say the least, nonplussed. Morris, who embraced choral movements and created dances that didn't highlight individual stars, used inspirations from folk dance and early modern traditions and often took his imagery from 17th-century English poetry. Though it didn't make sense to early audiences, over the years L'allegro — though rarely performed because of the resources it requires — has acquired something of a cult status. The music is by Handel, and the libretto is by Charles Jennens (based on John Milton's poetry). For these performances, Marika Kuzman directs the UC Berkeley Chamber Chorus, and Nicholas McGegan leads the Philharmonia Baroque Orchestra. The Mark Morris Dance Group also performs a repertory program Sept. 12 through 14 that includes a world premiere set to music by Bartók. Fri.-Sat., 8 p.m.; Sun., 3 p.m., UC Berkeley, Bancroft at Telegraph, Berk. $32-$56. # les liaisons dangereuses

BY CHODERLOS de LACLOS
ADAPTED AND DIRECTED BY GILES HAVERGAL

Deliciously wicked and perversely cynical, Les Liaisons Dangereuses is an elegant game of lust, seduction, and betrayal played out in the parlors and boudoirs of 18th-century France. When ex-lovers the Marquise de Merteuil and the Vicomte de Valmont scheme to destroy the virtue of two piously innocent women, society becomes their audience and scandal their drama.

"Among the happiest and most endearing works American dance has seen. There is no question that it is a masterpiece."
— San Francisco Chronicle

This "gloriously inventive ode to life on earth" (NY Times) is considered by many to be one of the 20th century's finest achievements in dance. By turns ravishingly beautiful, enchantingly witty, and deeply moving, Mark Morris' tour-de-force work is a perfect, joyful marriage of music and movement.

Opening

Confusion of Genders Confusion of Genders, directed by French novelist Ilan Duran Cohen and starring a cast of improbably gorgeous, angsty actors, is a surprisingly sweet meditation on growing older without giving up one's sexual adventurousness. Thirtysomething hero Alain is a neurotic lawyer pursued by several wet dreams' worth of hot young men and women. But as much as he adores bisexual promiscuity, he also wants to settle down, get married to his smart female boss Laurence, and have kids. Although everyone around him seems more or less comfortable with Alain's appetites, he's inexplicably torn between his beautiful male lover Christophe (who says he doesn't care if Alain sleeps around) and his wife (who says she doesn't care if he loves her). Generally French comedies should be avoided, but Confusion of Genders proves that when it comes to treating queerness and non-monogamy with a light touch, nobody can do it better. (1:34) Galaxy (Annalee Newitz)

Devdas The Four Star opens a regular run of "the biggest-budgeted Bollywood film to date," a recent selection of the theater's Asian Film Festival. (3:02) Four Star.

Dickie Roberts: Former Child Star In this Adam Sandler-produced comedy, David Spade stars as the titular washed-up star who tries to experience a "real" childhood by hiring an average family to adopt him. (1:39)

The Girl from Paris A young agricultural student (Mathilde Seigner) buys a gone-to-seed farm in the French countryside from a bitter, retiring widower (Michel Serrault). Her attempts to modernize the estate's business meet with a resounding success until the cold season comes in, wherein the elder gentleman realizes she may need his help. What initially starts out as yet another anti-society/pro-nature trip down spiritual enlightenment lane slowly transforms into an elegiac look at loneliness in both the spring of youth and the winter of the twilight years. The film doesn't avoid the inherent sentimentality of the material so much as come at it sideways, presenting the duo's tentative reaching out towards each other less as a string-laden message than an ambivalent attempt at capturing the toll of emotional isolation. It still suffers from a tone that's more meandering than meditative, but its ability to negotiate prickly poignancy minus the sap gives the story an oddly compelling charm. (1:43) (Fear)

Herod's Law See Movie Clock. (1:56)

Monday in the Sun No matter what George W. tells us, these jobless, desperate times can really be a downer. So it won't be hard to relate to the jobless, desperate characters ambling through Spanish director Fernando Leon de Aranda's new film, which follows a few beer-bellied, middle-age male friends as they drink beer, sing bad karaoke, and look irreversibly miserable as they stagnate in a hell of unemployment and apathy. Sexy star Javier Bardem (looking amazingly unsexy here) plays Santa, the quiet leader of the group, who randomly preaches the injustices of the system and of the world to his slouching posse. Santa's tirades, like Aranda's film, are stirring and inspiring for the first half of the film, and for anyone who has struggled to get by, his experiences are all too real. Unfortunately, the film turns as dull and lifeless as its central characters, making what could have been a moving social commentary about as exciting as waiting in the unemployment line. (1:53) (Gachman)

New Suit Let's just admit it: our "little people" egos are dying for confirmation that Hollywood is every bit the barren Nastyland we imagine it to be. New Suit, directed by François Velle, is a smart satire that fully satisfies such voyeuristic bloodlust. Jordan Bridges (Dad is Beau) plays Kevin Taylor, a studio hack/aspiring screenwriter disillusioned by the realization that his peers and their bosses brand screenplays "hot" based solely on buzz. The frustrated Taylor plays with the rumor mill and soon everyone is voraciously seeking a pretend script. A la The Emperor's New Clothes, no one will admit they haven't seen it as studio executives, starlets and agents pretend to have dined, dated, and signed the non-existent writer. Though New Suit pushes believability to the edge, first-time writer and actual studio hack Craig Sherman gives the script the wicked ring of in-joke truth (or fantasy). It's The Player-lite, which is damn good fun. (1:34) (Koh)

The Order The director (Brian Helgeland) and both stars (Heath Ledger, Shannyn Sossamon) of A Knight's Tale reunite for this supernatural religious thriller, which presumably will not include "We Will Rock You" on the soundtrack. (1:42)

Ongoing

American Splendor Shari Springer Berman and Roger Pulcini's film grafts the documentary portraiture of Terry Zwigoff's Crumb on the fictional narrative of Zwigoff's Daniel Clowes adaptation, Ghost World, and comes up with something less than either of those great films — but still the best U.S. fictive filmmaking in this summer of bummers. American Splendor travels from vignette to vignette, losing and gaining momentum, rarely mimicking the long interior monologues or abrupt endings of Harvey Pekar's comics. It livens up and finds a purpose with the arrival of Hope Davis's Joyce Brabner — the film's chief strong point is its characterization of her marriage to Pekar (Paul Giamatti). Splendor casually addresses the fact that Pekar's comic is drawn by a variety of artists, allowing characters' appearances to shift from one sequence to another (one minute, Drew Friedman's smudgy daytime nightmares; the next, Joe Zabel's crisp nervous energy). An all-animated version might have imaginatively extended this trait, which simultaneously defines Pekar's portraiture and makes it playfully elusive — even free spirited. (1:41) (Huston)

American Wedding (1:36)

And Now Ladies and Gentlemen Filmmaker Claude Lelouch was a peripheral figure of the French nouvelle vague when he unleashed A Man and a Woman on the world in 1966. The shadow of his most famous film looms large over his latest endeavor, from the inverse in-joke of the title to the trademark bossa nova that plays softly in the background. This go-round is an exhalation of a curdled old Europe, the kind of place where an old-school jewel thief (Jeremy Irons) and a sad-eyed chanteuse (Patricia Kaas) can marinate in a sauce of soul-sick sophistication. Both suffer from sudden blackouts, chronic amnesia, and the ability to tint film stock at will, which eventually leads them to pas de deux into the Moroccan desert searching for magical elixirs and mystical saints. Lelouch toys with the themes of redemption and spiritual enlightenment that poke through the ruffled façade of world-weariness, but seriously, when you're staring at Irons hamming it up in hippie gear, the guffaws begin to drown out any greater notions or higher truths. (2:06) (Fear)

L'auvergne espagnole (1:56)

Bad Boys II (2:25)

The Battle of Shaker Heights A misfit teen (Shia LaBeouf) with a serious chip on his shoulder and an obsession with war reenactments tries to negotiate the minefields of adolescence, a beyond fucked-up home life, and a crush on the older sister (Amy Smart) of his preppy best friend (Elden Henson). Those Project Greenlight fans who tuned in every week to watch the behind-the-scenes car wreck of the film's making will find this bland exercise in faux irreverence anticlimactic; there's nothing nearly as interesting in the final product as there was in any given episode of the show. Neophyte directors-contest winners Kyle Rankin and Efram Potelle's modus operandi seems to primarily consist of pointing a camera toward movement, giving the whole endeavor the feeling of an expensive student film project. LaBeouf gamely attempts to inject an angry young man into the smart-ass-by-numbers caricature and give his rebel a cause, but not even his natural charisma can keep this battered battleship afloat. (1:25) (Fear)

Bend It Like Beckham (1:42)

Bugs! (1:40) Metreon IMAX.

Camp Camp takes us through a season at Camp Ovation, where all of the most talented drama geeks disappear to each summer, in case anyone was wondering. Michael arrives fresh from getting bashed at his high school prom for showing up in drag. Vlad fights hard to dispel golden-boy impressions (but nonetheless looks and sings like the missing sixth Backstreet Boy) and is somehow, mysteriously straight. Ellen, slightly insecure and friend to all of the fags at Camp Ovation, is glad to hear it. They and the rest of the drama gang eat, drink, and sleep tap routines, Shakespearean monologues, and show tunes, show tunes, show tunes, producing a new play at the grueling rate of every two weeks. While there are some seriously After-School Special moments, it's a sweet film with some good performances and a couple of plot lines it's a pleasure to think a small portion of teenage America may experience. (1:54) (Lynn Rapoport)

Capturing the Friedmans (1:47)

The Cuckoo In Alexander Rogozhkin's brilliant satire, Veiko (Ville Haapasalo), a Finnish lad recruited by the S.S., has pulled the short straw of duty: he's been "cuckoo'd," or chained (literally) to a rock with a sniper rifle and instructions to kill advancing enemy soldiers. After he eventually Houdinis his way out of the predicament, he runs across a local Lapp lass (Anni-Kristiina Juuso) who's nursing a wounded Russian officer (Viktor Bychkov) back to health. Both the strapping lad and the elder gentleman wield a strong attraction to the earth mother — who's got more than enough libido for all three of them — and a mutual hatred of each other. None of them, however, share a common tongue. Rogozhkin's handling of the trio's skewed three-way conversations is so deadpan it would give Kaurismäki pause, but his central conceit, that even humanity at its worst can eventually fashion a forum and persevere, betrays a pulse behind the smirk. (1:44) (Fear)

Dirty Pretty Things Stephen Frears (Dangerous Liaisons, The Grifters, High Fidelity) has returned over and over to smaller British projects between Hollywood assignments, notably two Roddy Doyle adaptations (The Snapper, The Van). Dirty Pretty Things is by a newish writer, Steve Knight, and in its tonally very different way it's almost as fresh a take on polyglot London as My Beautiful Laundrette.

Things revolves around Okwe (Chiwetel Ejiofor), a Nigerian doctor-exile living a hand-to-mouth life in the U.K. He's illegally working as a cab driver and a night clerk at a boutique hotel run by pragmatically slimy Juan (Sergi Lopez). Likewise employed at the hotel as housekeeping staff is Muslim Turkish Senay (Audrey Tautou), a registered refugee awaiting governmental approval of her immigrant status. Before long, Okwe discovers that the hotel profits from on-site organ harvesting that preys on desperate illegal immigrants. Knight's script doesn't always smooth together its various mystery, suspense, caper, and slice-of-life elements. The dialogue is sometimes too pontificating, and the incipient romance between Okwe and Senay is perhaps the least effective aspect here. But Frears handles it all so beautifully that the end result is still near extraordinary. (1:49) (Harvey)

Le Divorce Left by her trustafarian mate, pregnant poet Roxy (Naomi Watts) is visited in Paris by her hungry-for-experience sis Isabel (Kate Hudson), who soon realizes she's clearly not in Santa Barbara anymore. With the help of her sibling and an expat writer (Glenn Close), Isabel cracks the French cultural code embedded in everything from cocktails to fashion, and together the sisters take in the drawing rooms, haute cuisine, silk lingerie, and rococo social convolutions of the Old World. Self-consciously witty, briskly paced, and true to its source, Le Divorce succeeds where other modern-day Merchant Ivory productions have faltered; it captures the follies, foibles, and faux pas that occur as two worlds collide and collide, as well as the soufflé-lite pleasures of the City of Light. (1:55) (Kimberly Chun)

Finding Nemo (1:41)

Freaky Friday (1:49)

Freddy vs. Jason If you're not a fan of horror movies (specific subgenre: '80s slasher flicks), if you loathe excess violence, or if your favorite movie of 2002 was The Hours, don't even bother. Freddy vs. Jason is not for you. However, any kid who grew up shrieking with delight over the creative kills of the almighty Krueger and Voorhees is bound to have a good time with this one, which sees the terrible two at first allied (on Elm Street), then locked in an epic, exceptionally blood-drenched clash of the titans (at Camp Crystal Lake). As "cinema," Freddy vs. Jason has some problems — laughable dialogue, plot holes, and a heroine whose figure is the most memorable part of her performance. But to quote the film, "Freddy is fighting Jason! What more do you want?" (1:32) (Eddy)

Gigantic: A Tale of Two Johns They Might Be Giants, the Brooklyn duo of John Flansburgh (glasses, guitarist) and John Linnell (citer, accordion player, more distinctively nasally vocals), are possibly the greatest snark-rock combo ever. Their greatest hits (or mostly non-hits, in actual chart terms) might comfortably stretch to two whole discs, with no two fans ever agreeing about track selection. TMBG are master musical-genre dilettantes; three minutes spent with them will reliably land somewhere between the painless, the amusing, and the nirvanic. For all but the dedicated (of which there are many), however, 30 minutes is pushing it. Ergo my mixed feelings about the 102 minutes that make up Gigantic: A Tale of Two Johns, A.J. Schnack's documentary homage to the band. If you love TMBG and every breath they exhale, you will be in hog heaven here — in good company, too, given the film's lineup of celebrity fans almost too geek-chic perfect to be believed (Dave Eggers, Harry Shearer, Conan O'Brien, Josh Korbuth, Janeane Garofalo, Jon Stewart). If you just like them, all of this feature's shiny toy-ness will begin to pall after a while, leaving you with a confusing mixture of delight, guilty ingratitude, and hunger for beefsteak. (1:42) (Harvey)

Grind (1:40)
The Italian Job Audiences who went into 1969's The Italian Job got a silly little caper film breezing past inanity, thanks to its post-mod '60s panache, the novelty of those British Minis racing around Turin, and Michael Caine's cucumberlike coolness. This title-borrowing retread, however, simply reheats a stock revenge plot with Angeleno aesthetic slickness, plenty of advertising for this year's Cooper model, and a Mark Wahlberg who's now officially one lousy remake over the line of good will; suffice to say, today's Cineplex hounds get a much rawer deal. The supporting cast super-sizes the usual heist suspects — the computer nerd, the demolition expert, the getaway driver — for maximum background noise while pretty boy Wahlberg and prodigal son Edward Norton mouth a screenwriter's idea of tough-guy-speak over millions worth of gold, car-chase shenanigans, Charlize Theron, etc. Director E. Gary Gray (The Negotiator) does exactly what he's paid to do, tying all the pretty bows tight on a film that's a Hollywood nocturnal emission — efficiently sleek and essentially soulless. (1:43) (Fear)

Jeepers Creepers 2 The trench-coated, winged killer — nearing the end of his every-23-years, 23-day feeding cycle, begun in the first film — returns to menace cornfields and bucolic, conveniently deserted country roads. Especially country roads traversed by school buses full of nubile young high school athletes. Logic problems and bad acting are, not surprisingly, in abundance, but the movie really does itself in by violating the "don't show the monster too much" horror movie rule (Hey! It's the Creeper! In close-up! Again!). Also, if you're going to show a headless corpse staggering about, it should at least be gruesome, if you can't manage scary. Even if you don't take into account its controversial writer-director (Victor Salva, a convicted child molester), Jeepers Creepers 2 seldom rises above mediocre, with only a knowingly exaggerated performance by Ray Wise (Laura Palmer's dad on Twin Peaks) worth noting. (1:44) (Eddy)

Lara Croft Tomb Raider: The Cradle of Life (2:00)
The Magdalene Sisters The Magdalene Laundries were set up as sanctuaries for Ireland's "wayward girls," a broad term that could be applied to young women who'd given birth to a child out of wedlock, such as Rose (Dorothy Duffy), or who'd been raped, like Margaret (Anne Marie Duff). Run by an order of nuns bearing the beyond-ironic moniker Sisters of Mercy, these church-operated institutions preached spiritual penance through hard labor and corporal punishment. Credit goes to the actresses, mostly unknowns and all pitch-perfect in their roles, but it's the director, Peter Mullan, who fuels the film with a harsh, lyrical fury. The Magdalene Sisters has stirred up its share of controversy (it was denounced by the Vatican the same day it won the Golden Lion at the Venice Film Festival), but Mullan has his sights set on bigger game than just kitchen-sink melodrama or sensationalism. His refusal to pander to audience expectations ups the ante substantially; what really makes The Magdalene Sisters such an extraordinary experience is that, unlike most cine-fictional drama rooted in fact, the eventual catharsis feels genuinely earned. (1:59) (Fear)

Marci X (1:24)

The Medallion Sucking like there's no tomorrow, this Hong Kong-U.S. coproduction purportedly wrapped principal shooting in March 2002. Given the long pause before release, you might reasonably suspect there were, uh, problems. Craptastic results duly bear out that conjecture. Jackie Chan plays an HK cop trying to protect a Dalai Lama-esque golden child (reference to the cruddy old Eddie Murphy movie fully intended) who controls a medallion that's "the Holy Grail of Eastern mythology." (Really? So the "East" has one mythology now?) It's purported to hold the "key to eternal life." Thus generic snotty British bad guy Julian Sands wants boy, jewelry, etc., or else he'll kill everybody. Insufferable comedy-relief from Lee Evans (Mouse Hunt), abysmal romantic relief from Claire Forlani, routine CGI effects, horrible computer-spat-out scripting, nonstop yet underwhelming action, and a hapless slipperiness on tone/humor/logic — all these make Medallion the worst Chan movie in aeons. At times it seems intended for children.

Whether that's simply a matter of pandering stupidity or whatnot, you can rest assured that no one over the age of 13 will be glad they paid admission price. (1:30) (Harvey) mer gunslinger (Kevin Costner), graze their herd near the territorial boundaries of a corrupt, controlling Irish rancher (Michael Gambon). An attempt at intimidation leaves one cowboy wounded and another murdered, leading Boss and his sidekick into town to settle a debt with cold stares and hot lead. Costner's latest directorial musing keeps its B-movie revenge narrative simple and its pacing deliciously deliberate, unafraid to take its time gearing up for an impressively brutal, bullet-ridden climax. A reverence for the genre's iconography, however, holds sway over the storytelling; the film is less a rumination on the Old West than a reference catalogue of old westerns, all homages and hat-tippings. A tendency for third-act speechifyin' and pontificatin' eventually smothers the movie's many pleasures, and what starts out as a lean, mean look at frontier justice turns into a horse opera sunk by an overdose of au-

The Other Side of the Bed Paula (Natalia Verbeke) dumps boyfriend Pedro (Guillermo Toledo) since, unbeknownst to him, she's in love with his caddish best friend, Javier (Ernesto Alterio). Javier keeps promising Paula he'll leave his wife, Sonia (Paz Vega), who, unbeknownst to him, has taken her consoling of the crushed Pedro to a decidedly more carnal level. Did I mention that they all have a tendency to unexpectedly break into Jerome Robbins-style choreography and sing bad Euro-pop tunes? This goofy hybrid of bedroom farce and old-school showstopper numbers has its libidinous musical chairs game down but misses the right mix-and-match of genres by a Castilian kilometer. Veteran Spanish director Emilio Martinez-Lazaro knows how to frame scenes but can't seem to work them into something cohesive, and the cast's ability to make the head games and heartbreaks believable is frittered away by fantasy homages that wear out their welcome in seconds flat. (1:44) (Fear) Party Monster How could a movie that casts Macaulay Culkin as Michael Alig (and gives nostalgic CPR to Stacey Q's "Two of Hearts") go wrong? Too many celebrity bit parts, not enough narrative focus, and absolutely no Screaming Rachel are just three of countless accidental answers provided by Fenton Bailey and Randy Barbato's drama debut. Bailey and Barbato's circus loses its charm long before it becomes an excuse to photograph Culkin and Chloë Sevigny as if they were separated-at-birth twins. The fact that Party Monster is more sympathetic to murderer than to victim would be less annoying if Alig and pal James St. James (Seth Green) were the geniuses the directors seem to think they are. Brattily imaginative? Yes. Brilliantly intelligent? No. Check out Bailey and Barbato's documentary of the same name instead. At least it has Screaming Rachel—if you don't know who that is, your vérité comedy education is incomplete. (1:38) Castro. (Huston) Passionada (1:45)

Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl In this seaworthy tale from Ring director Gore Verbinski and action-happy producer Jerry Bruckheimer, offbeat swashbuckler Captain Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp) and blacksmith Will Turner (Lord of the Rings elf Orlando Bloom) team up to pursue the snarling buccaneers who've kidnapped Will's beloved Elizabeth (Keira Knightley from Bend It like Beckham). Seems the crew of the Black Pearl (including Geoffrey Rush as their monkey-toting leader) believe she's the key to lifting the nasty curse that plagues them. Pirates taps plenty of familiar motifs—a talking parrot ("Shiver me timbers!"), a cave filled with treasure, cannon fights, people saying, "Arrrr!"—and follows a pretty rote escape-and-capture story line. And yeah, it's based on a Disneyland ride. But thanks in no small part to Depp's oddly endearing performance, the good-natured Pirates aims for fun and largely succeeds. (2:23) (Eddy)

The Princess Blade This potentially gratifying mix of martial arts, science fiction, and political intrigue betrays its pulp origins by succumbing to some disastorously trendy dramatic tropes. Set in a future where North Korea has taken over Japan, and where members of the emperor's private guard have become paid assassins, the film follows the trials of warrior Yuki (famed swimsuit model Yumiko Shaku) as she struggles to learn the truth behind her mother's murder—along with her own true identity—in time to do some carin' and sharin' with a dreamy revolutionary dude. Director Shinsuke Sato is every bit the neophyte: Instead of exploring the topical sci-fi of his manga-inspired premise, Sato focuses on soap opera-style characters played by actors incapable of supplying more than a single dimension apiece. The film's saving grace might have been its well-staged action sequences, choreographed by Donnie Yen (who performed similar duties for Iron Monkey and Blade II). But as

A NEW BRITISH COMEDY BY SHANE MEADOWS

Without warning, decent-but-dull Dek (Rhys Ifans) proposes to his girlfriend Shirley (Shirley Henderson) on national television. Trouble is, Shirley's delinquent ex-boyfriend Jimmy (Robert Carlyle) witnesses the proposal and becomes convinced that his nerdy rival doesn't stand a chance against a renewed romantic assault from the great love of her life. While Shirley seems destined to succumb to Jimmy's charms, he hasn't reckoned on the formidable resistance of her peers, or anticipated a heroic, last-minute challenge from the lovesick Dek.

Ongoing

any casual kung fu viewer could tell you, three good fight scenes do not make a good movie. (1:33) (Macías)

Seabiscuit (2:21)

The Secret Lives of Dentists The erratic Alan Rudolph has always enjoyed, with varying success, diving into self-contained milieus — from the Me Decade mecca in Welcome to L.A. to the famous salons of The Moderns and Mrs.

Parker and the Vicious Circle. But he's arguably never investigated a scene as familiar yet surprising as the one here: a suburban middle-class marriage, with children. Dentists who share a practice, David (Campbell Scott) and Dana Hurst (Hope Davis) have reached that point in their lives where activity is incessant but actual stimulation is rare; with three very young daughters, a mortgage, and god knows what other ordinary obligations stretching years ahead, their well-plotted future can be seen as either comforting or suffocating. Secret Lives' long climax is nothing more than a family of five getting the flu — and it might be the most engrossing, detailed, nail-biting set piece you'll see all year. (1:44) Smith Rafael. (Harvey) Spellbound A frightening, often comedic look into the family lives of the nation's top young spellers, Jeff Blitz's documentary too easily balances the oddities of overachievers: if there's an obsessed speller, there's also a nonchalant one; some families are wealthy, some are poor. There's diversity, love, faith, and most predictably, a fight against the odds. Though the film builds tension as it reaches various humiliating climaxes at the microphone, it suffers the same malady as its subjects: it feels far more stage-managed than earned or lived. (1:36) (Gerhard)

Spy Kids 3-D: Game Over (1:25)

Step into Liquid There's nothing more photographic than bronzed surfers cutting through sun-dappled waves — and yet there are few things as hard to capture on-screen as the exhilarating rush that makes surfing so addictive and so popular. This paradox has dogged surfumentaries since their first dip into the cinematic pool, and it's something that Step into Liquid seems to know it can't outpace. So filmmaker and pedigreed surf aficionado Dana "Son of Bruce" Brown bypasses capturing lightning in a bottle, concentrating instead on fashioning a cinematic Surf Culture for Dummies that's less an Endless Summer than endless summaries of facts on the modern-day wave-rider lifestyle. The MTV-friendly aesthetics and moonoggy narration (warbly voiced philosophy about harmony, nature, etc.) are a poor substitute for actual adrenaline, however, and even with some gorgeous visuals, it still feels like a simplified tourist version of a second-hand high. (1:28) Smith Rafael. (Fear)

Stoked: The Rise and Fall of Gator A lipside to the loud entertainment of last year's Dogtown and Z-Boys, Helen Stickler's thoroughly disturbing documentary portrait of fallen thrasher Mark "Gator" Rogowski begins with the lonely sound of wheels grinding against pavement. Stickler's movie has the cheap 'n' scrappy look of a skateboard video, but she doesn't promote the skater-as-rock-star approach of those vids (and Stacy Peralta's Dogtown), she takes it apart — methodically and painfully. Rogowski's journey from a troubled childhood to troubling teen fame and fortune led to a homicidal wipeout, and recordings of his incarcerated phone calls provide Stoked's bewildered voice-over narration. His shameless love of the camera also means Stickler has copious footage of his big-hair-and-Sheila-E-shirt glory days as a spokesmodel and disturbing footage of his fall from grace — and the board — when skateboarding hit the streets (a shift similar to hair metal's early '90s defeat at the hands of punk). It would be a shame if Stoked's audience was limited to skaters: one of the best docs of this year, Stickler's movie widens beyond skateboarding to incisively portray the love affair between youth culture and money, a match made in America but often destined for hell. (1:34) (Huston)

S.W.A.T. (1:56)

Swimming Pool Charlotte Rampling plays Sarah Morton, an author in the Patricia Highsmith mold — with an emphasis on mold — who ventures to a vine-laced villa in the south of France to begin work on the latest addition to her musty mystery series. Ludovic Sagnier plays Julie, the slutty daughter of Sarah's publisher, and an unwelcome surprise guest at Sarah's writer's retreat. The two don't waste any time invading each other's privacy. Whether that privacy is typed on a laptop or penned in girly cursive, it's a key to asserting power over the other. Swimming Pool's "secrets" tease audiences; ultimately, the film is a poison-lensed love letter to director François Ozon's producer. It's time for this mildly naughty boy to make a wildly rude film that pleases no one but himself. (1:54) (Huston)

Sepia blues: Mayor Juan Vargas (Damián Alcázar) goes from idealistic to corrupt in record time in Luis Estrada's Herod's Law.

'Herod's Law'

Political savvy

There are many edicts leaders have used to govern, but history tends to highlight a particular "golden" rule of those who've gained power and hope to keep it: "Either fuck them or you will get fucked." So proclaims a character in Herod's Law, a cynical satire of Mexican politics that knows just where to throw its sharpened knives — it is the first film to directly attack the country's long-standing ruling party (Partido Revolucionario Institucional) and was nearly banned by the now-defunct powers that be before sweeping the box office back in 2000. Finally opening here in the midst of a gubernatorial media circus and under the larger shadow of subliminal federal fascism, its timing seems eerily apropos. The small township of San Pedro de los Saguaros has a knack for unpleasantly disposing of mayors, which worries state officials as an election looms near. They need a patsy to temporarily oversee the burg until the votes are cast, so they turn to the most bumbling party member they can find: Juan Vargas (Damián Alcázar), a junkyard attendant with a Zapata mustache and a naively ideological bent. The locals run him out of town in record time. Juan returns with a law book, a gun, and the aforementioned maxim, quickly establishing authority through the time-honored political cocktail of blackmail, intimidation, and empty promises. Soon enough, he's adding murder to his modus of retaining his rule. To say filmmaker-cowriter Luis Estrada's Swiftian vision of society is dark doesn't quite cut it; his film presents a landscape of absolute corruption, where revolutions and religion can be bought and good intentions quickly morph into blind greed. Even in its broader farcical moments, Herod's Law attacks its target with such savagery that you can practically taste the blood under the laughter. (David Fear)

The Melée

Does the phrase "brake master cylinder pushrod came loose" roll easily off your tongue? Do you drive an old car that breaks down a lot and enjoy standing around trying to fix it with other people who drive old cars that break down a lot? Do you like riding on good-looking, curvy northern California back roads? If you answered yes to at least two out of three, the California Melée is probably for you. Described by organizers as "the original low-buck classic sports car rally," the Melée has been drawing hip car geeks to the Palace of Fine Arts parking lot every September since 1997 to execute smoky burnouts before heading out on some of the most beautiful roads around.

For those in the know, the California Melée may sound suspiciously like a spoof of California Mille, the four-day, $4,000, fancy-schmancy vintage-car rally that kicks off each April at the Fairmont Hotel in a glitter of Maseratis, Ferraris, Lancias, Alfa Romeos as old as your grandmother, and other cars of that ilk driven by people of that ilk.

The three-day Melée, on the other hand, will set you and your passenger back $349.95 (those who entered before Sept. 1 paid $300), which covers the all-important route map, a couple snazzy T-shirts, a triumphant awards banquet for those who make it back to San Francisco, and two nights' stay at the Driftwood Motel in Fort Bragg, where every room is an adventure. (According to ride co-organizer Jeff Guzaitis, some smell "like dead guy" and others "like Ferdinand Marcos's palace." Reassuringly, he adds, "It's supercheesy, but it's clean.")

The ride's predecessor, the Dirtbag 500, was discontinued following an unfortunate accident in '94, but the "we run what we have, and we fix it ourselves" vintage-car types kept coming back to the organizers, Guzaitis and Harley Welch, begging for another rally geared toward people like them: people who want to drive around and have a good time but aren't about to shell out a few grand to do so.

The first day of last year's Melée I kept wondering (from the passenger seat) why none of the cars — including the 1954 Alfa Romeo Giulietta Sprint Normale I was catching a ride in — had stereo systems. That's the first thing I would fix in a car if I had the know-how. When I mentioned it, however, my friend and driver, John, gently pointed out that these diehards, driving cars they've put together themselves, are too busy listening to their vehicles to bother with a stereo. For one thing, an old car makes a music of its own, the kinds of whums and thrums composer John Cage would appreciate. For another, if you're not listening to a car like this, you have no way of knowing when it's going to explode. And it's often close to it, seemingly. John kept pulling over along the ferny redwood routes of the Mendocino National Forest and the Napa County oak hills to make sure the car wasn't about to catch on fire. I thought he was kidding until I realized we wouldn't be stopping every 15 miles and lifting the hood if he was.

If you're a "run what you brung" type, however, stopping to fix your car is part of the point. And if you're a passenger, the scenery will keep you occupied all the way from San Francisco to Leggett and back again. The Melée offers the whole assortment of northern California landscapes, from the Avenue of the Giants' redwoods to precipitous coastal views. Just don't expect a peaceful drive through the country. The cars are old, loud, and stinky. And accidents do happen. As John put it, "Like eating cheeseburgers or smoking cigarettes, there's certainly a danger in it." (Speaking of cheeseburgers, the route also offers plenty of greasy spoons for hungry drivers to stop at.)

Guzaitis won't reveal this year's route, which varies some from year to year "to keep the freeloaders" — and the cops — "at bay." However, the basic trajectory is through Napa on back roads, up to Lake Berryessa, splash through some water crossings, head up to Clear Lake, farther north to Willits, across the mountains, out through the redwood forests to the coast — and back. One treat of a road is known as the "Ewok Adventure," for its scenery and challenging terrain.

For company you can expect mechanics, artists, computer geeks, tattooed hot-rodgers, and some more upscale Mille types with shiny cars. However, Guzaitis says, "Snobbery is not tolerated. You can have a really nice car, but you have to understand that a lot of us don't." Got an Iso Rivolta with essential parts reattached via vise grips? You'll fit right in. As for ageism, officially Melée cars are pre-1975 sports or touring cars, and while there are some rule benders, be warned: "You can't bring your '82 K Chrysler car," Guzaitis says. "We'll shut that right down." ❖

How to do it

This year's California Melée is Sept. 6-8. To sign up (hurry: space is limited) or get more details, e-mail jeffguz@ix.netcom or write to Melée HQ, 2112 23rd St., S.F., CA 94107. Also go to Yahoo! group "californiamelée."

If you're a two-motorized-wheels type, check out May's Moto Melée, featuring a similar route and even more high jinks. E-mail or write to the above addresses and go to Yahoo! group "motomelee."

Pets

CAT NEEDS A HOME: Bunny is a lovely medium-haired white cat. He loves to be with people and with other cats. He is 1 year old, and has a beautiful white coat with a streak of grey on the head. He purrs and rolls over when petted, and comes to sleep in bed at night. He needs a truly loving home where his sweetness will be deeply appreciated. (415) 377-2725 Sweet and Beautiful Cats.

CAT NEEDS A HOME: Diamond is a wonderful, one-of-a-kind companion cat. He is joyful and playful, and full of optimism. At the same time, he is affectionate and sweet. His medium length black coat is elegant and well groomed. And his eyes are simply irresistible. (415) 377-2725.

CAT NEEDS A HOME: If you meet Zoe, you will certainly fall in love. There is something special about her. Perhaps her green eyes and the smiling little face? A short-haired white/tabby Zoe is very affectionate and sweet. She is also very comfortable in the company of other cats. (415) 377-2725.

CAT NEEDS A HOME: Mando is a large male orange cat some 6 years of age, but he has a soul of a little kitten. He loves to be petted. He purrs in response. Mando has tested positive for FIV but does not have any symptoms of AIDS, and may in fact never develop it. (415) 377-2725.

CATS NEED A HOME - Nicolas and Matteo are two wonderful 9-month-old littermates. Nicolas is a short-haired black-and-white sweet lap cat; Matteo is a medium-haired grey-and-white joyous play cat. They sleep together and groom each other. Call (415) 377-2725 Sweet and Beautiful Cats.

China, a 2 year female white Am-Staff who would love to be your friend. She's fun and gorgeous and loves to go running, crate and potty trained. Call Reunion Rescue (415) 586-8229 or email doggirl@earthlink.net for more information about China and other wonderful dogs.

September 13, Saturday Sunset Health/ Safety Fair

Supervisor Fiona Ma and the Mayor's Office of Neighborhood Services are teaming together to bring the 2003 Sunset District Health and Safety Fair to District 4. The goal of the Fair is to engage the community on the importance of public health and safety issues. Featured at the Fair will be booths and activities sponsored by various city departments and local merchants and community organizations. The air came about in response to current issues in the community from an increase in traffic accidents on the 19th Avenue corridor to recent health concerns such as SARS. The day will feature workshops, interactive booths, free health screenings and free samples and materials. 11:00 am to 3:00 pm. Sunset Recreation Center, 2201 Lawton Street, at 28th Ave. Free. Frances Hsieh, Supervisor Office, (415) 554-7460. Tyrone Jue, Mayor's Office, (415) 554-6467.

Maya Sacred Ceremony

MAYA SACRED CYCLE SUNRISE CEREMONY & CELEBRATION 6am - 10 am at Dolores Park (18th & 20th Sts.) SF. The Bay Area Maya Community invites all people to join us in celebrating another completion and beginning of the Mayan Sacred Cycle. In the Mayan calendar, the cycle is completed every 260 days. It is a day of joyous celebration and deep spiritual significance for Mayas throughout Central America. A traditional Maya priestess, Maria del Carmen Tuy, will be making the trip here from Guatemala to preside over the ceremonies. Traditional music and foods will be offered to participants. Contact: Enrique Lopez, (510) 482-8097, Director, GRUPO MAYA Qusamej Junan.

Wednesday 5:30. Free Trial Class. Sivananda Yoga Center, 1200 Arguello Blvd at Frederick. Call (415) 681-2731 or visit www.slyoga.com.

September 25, Ongoing Cinemayaat Arab Film Festival

The 7th Annual Cinemayaat Arab Film Festival. Opening Night at San Francisco's Castro Theatre- September 25, September 26 & 27 - Roxie Cinema in San Francisco. September 27 & 28 - Wheeler Hall in Berkeley. October 3 & 4 - Towne Theater in San Jose. Closing Night at Wheeler Hall in Berkeley - October 5. Cinemayaat, the San Francisco Arab Film Festival, (AFF) will screen over 20 independently produced feature films, documentaries and shorts - once again proving that the Arab culture is too abundant and diverse to submit to popular preconception and classification. Advance tickets for the festival can be bought through the website (www.aaf.org). Otherwise, directly at the theater, beginning opening night. Costs: General Admission - $9; Students and Seniors - $7; Festival Pass - $95 includes all events.

BAY GUARDIAN PET OF THE WEEK

Houdini

This little cutie came to us as a very shy boy. Now he loves play with interactive toys, is delighted to have you pet him, and won't even mind if you pick him up: he's a love bug and says "You'd better take me home!" He's a 5-month-old neutered male, black domestic shorthair kitty who has been at the shelter since Jun 24, 2003. Come meet Houdini ID#A003545 at The SF/SPCA, 2500 16th Street.

When you adopt CATS from The San Francisco SPCA, you'll get all the awesome goodies that come with pets from The San Francisco SPCA: a free first medical exam from a local veterinarian, temporary identification tags, and a medical assistance plan. All this and an absolutely fabulous cat for $75.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF ANNE SANDKUHLER CASE NUMBER PES-03-285155. To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of FRANK BOWLING

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by ANNE SANDKUHLER in the Superior Court of California, County of San Francisco, CA. THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that ANNE SANDKUHLER be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on SEPTEMBER 24, 2003 9:00 a.m. in the Probate Department, Superior Court of California, County of San Francisco, 400 McAllister St., Rm 204, San Francisco, CA 94102.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time of filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Attorney for petitioner: VIVIAN V. HAMMILL, 716 Highland St., Helena, MT, Telephone: (406) 444-3308. Signed Vivian V. Hammill, Attorney For Petitioner. Dates of Publishing: Sept. 3, 10, 17, 2003. L# 374904

by michelle tea and jessica lanyadoo

Sept. 3-9

Aries (March 21-April 19)

Oh, timid Aries! You can hide your heart from a lot of people but not from the all-seeing gaze of Psychic Busybodies Inc. Indeed, it's our job to bore through your privacy with our laser-beam eyeballs. And what do we see this week? A piece of your tender heart that you're too scared to share but simply must.

Taurus (April 20-May 20)

Deep down in that wise place where your intuition lives, Taurus, you have a strong feeling that things are gonna be all right. And they are! Your challenge in the days ahead is to resist clinging to the good things that come your way. There's more where they came from, so try more enjoying and less worrying.

Gemini (May 21-June 21)

You're on fire, Gemini! Can you feel it? This is a great week to connect with your inner eternal flame, to pat yourself on the back for having so much damn integrity in such a slippery, morally bankrupt world, and to cultivate a sense of awe for your capabilities — which you've only begun to comprehend.

Cancer (June 22-July 22)

Stop it, Cancer, stop it right now! We refuse to allow you to continue beating yourself up like this! And for what? Things you can't change, that's what. We suspect the antidote to this bad behavior resides in some superloving communication, the kind that makes your heart get all gooey and wide open.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22)

Patience, Leo! We know you're all jazzed up and want to dash headlong into whatever spotlight you're considering, but we beg you to slow the pace. Head toward that goal of yours at a steady gallop, not a sprint. Sustainable bursts of effort now allow you a brighter shine in the future.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Excellent, excellent Virgo! We're totally stoked, dude, that you're ready to deal with your fears in such a courageous, head-on manner! Of course, such noble bravery doesn't mean you won't be scared, or popping some nice valierian capsules to ward off anxiety, but it does mean you can handle it.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

Well, if you love yourself so much,

Libra, why don't you go marry yourself? No, really. This is a great week to tie the knot, as chances are you'll be falling in love with yourself all over again. However, we do advise against the wild Ibiza honeymoon. It's all about true love — and balance.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

A bit of a tricky week for you, Scorpio. What we'd like to see is more of those efforts to be super-duper loving to yourself and those lucky enough to be part of your secret inner circle. Once anesthetized with bliss, take an enthusiastic peek into your vulnerable parts and see what you find.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

If the passion cooker isn't blowing its top, spewing dazzling streams of molten desire all over your heart's kitchen, something is wrong, Sagittarius! Please report to whatever scenic overlook gives you the best view of your life, so you can see what's holding you back and pull its plug.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Know what's worse than feeling sad, Capricorn? Feeling so irritated at your sadness that you bustle around, adamantly denying you're sad and becoming increasingly shut off from the treasure box of your own emotions. That's a drag. Show up for your feelings this week.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

Sure, you're overwhelmed now, Aquarius, but this isn't about now; it's about the future! Don't lose sight of what you're working toward this week, when your life makes you feel like hopping the next train outta here. It's all about the big picture, which comes into focus soon enough.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20)

You're on the right track, Pisces, and it's a track of your own making — a jungle trail you're cutting with your own sharp fingers, a dirt road you're paving over with sparkling seashells and glitter bits and sturdy, durable concrete. It'll take you right up to the front door of an incredibly big change. ♦
